School board puts stamp on $6.8-million budget

Calling the district's financial picture brighter than anticipated, Kem Keithly, superintendent of schools, presented a tentative $6,821,527 budget for 1977-78 to the Board of Education Tuesday. The budget was approved unanimously.

Receipts anticipated for the coming fiscal year amount to $6,771,283. The difference between receipts and expenditures will be made up with money from the district's reserve fund. At present, this fund totals $1,699,641.

"What this means," said Keithly, "is that we will cut into our reserves about $50,000. This is quite acceptable. We like to keep around $1 million in the reserve fund."

If the budget follows Keithly's projections, the reserve fund should total $1,649,397, or $50,244 less than the present total.

Keithly said the budget could have been balanced this year if a building program had not been necessary.

The greatest increase in expenditures will be in the capital outlays, or construction and furnishing costs. That figure leaped from $136,842 last year to $593,475 for 1977-78. Most of the capital outlays fund will go toward construction of 15 classrooms to be added to the junior high school.

Keithly said the cost of the addition will run in excess of $568,000. However, some of that cost may be offset by federal funds.

According to Dr. Elmer Myers, director of the district's Title I program, the state has about $3 million in funds from the Economic Development Administration to distribute. He said an application for $350,000 to help construct the classrooms at the junior high was presented to Gov. Joseph Teasdale's office Tuesday.

Myers said he expects about 10 applications to be granted funds. He estimated 50 to 75 applications have been made to the governor.

A 6.6 per cent salary increase for the district's 260 teachers accounts for an increase of about $300,000 in the budget's instructional account.

Administrative cost increases also reflected salary boosts.

Keithly said the base pay for administrators was raised from $11,838 last year to $12,100 for the coming year. Administrative costs are expected to rise from $132,141 last year to $159,075 for 1977-78. Keithly noted that the elimination of one principal's post with the closing of Mark Twain School saved the district about $1,607 per month.

In an executive session that preceeded the regular meeting, the board voted to make Dr. Lee Schluckebier principal of Heber Hunt. Schluckebier had been Mark Twain principal. David Logan recently resigned as Heber Hunt principal to take a position at Blue Springs.

Utility costs are expected to rise about 30 per cent in the coming year, according to Keithly. That increase will inflate the budget about $50,000 over last year's fuel and electricity costs.

The school district's transportation contract is scheduled to jump $31,000 next year. However, the middle school conversion and redistricting due to the abandonment of Mark Twain will not increase transportation expenses, according to Keithly.

He said eventually the middle school should save the school district from $30,000 to $40,000 annually.

Keithly said the district had projected dipping into the reserve fund for about $81,000. However, he said a "turnaround" of about $150,000 prevented such a move. He attributed this to cutbacks in expenses and a slight increase in receipts.

He said he does not anticipate major changes in the Death out for rape, says court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that states may not impose the death penalty for the crime of rape.

The court said the death penalty "is a disproportionate punishment for rape."

"It is difficult to accept the notion, and we do not, that the rape, with or without aggravating circumstances, should be punished more heavily than the deliberate killer as long as the rapist does not himself take the life of his victim," the court said in an opinion by Justice Byron R. White.

The court's action, decided by a 7-2 vote, struck down the death sentence a Georgia court imposed on Ehrlich Anthony Coker, convicted for the 1974 rape of a 16-year-old Waycross, Ga., housewife who three weeks before had given birth to her first child.

Although Georgia's law concerned the rape of adult women, the court decision's wording indicated that states may not impose the death penalty even for the rape of children.

Joining White's opinion were Justices Potter Stewart, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens. Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall, who oppose the death penalty under any circumstance for any crime, filed concurring opinions.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. voted to strike down Coker's sentence but said he did not think the death penalty for rape was cruel and unusual punishment in all circumstances.

"Although rape invariably is a reprehensible crime, there is no indication that petitioner's offense was committed with excessive brutality or that the victim sustained serious or lasting injury," Powell said.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice William H. Rehnquist dissented, saying that the death penalty for rape can be a justified punishment.

In a separate, related action, the justices struck down the death sentences of two other convicted Georgia rapists who had appeals pending before the court.

The justices sent the cases of John Wallace Eberheart Jr. and John Wesley Hooks back to the Georgia Supreme Court for the imposition of new sentences. Presumably, Coker and the two others will be sentenced to life imprisonment.

Florida Girl Scout abducted

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — A 15-year-old Girl Scout wearing a Mickey Mouse T-shirt was dragged struggling from her tent in a state park by a heavily built man today as her sister and another scout screamed in terror, authorities said.

The girl was identified by sheriff's deputies as Charlotte Grosse of Venice, Fla.

The man ripped open the back of the three-person tent in 460-acre Oscar Scherer State Park about 6 a.m. EDT, grabbed the girl by her long brown hair and dragged her into sharp-pointed palmetto scrub, Sarasota County Sheriff's deputies said.

The man was described as heavily built with dark hair and a deep voice. He was wearing dark clothes, officers said.

Earlier this month three Girl Scouts were sexually assaulted and then murdered at a camp in Locust Grove, Okla. Authorities have charged 33-year-old prison escapee Gene Leroy Hart in the June 13 slayings and are still searching for him.

The abduction here touched off an immediate manhunt in Sarasota County. About 100 law enforcement officers, volunteers, a mounted posse and even Florida Power & Light Co. service trucks joined the search that was set up under the sheriff's specialized weapons and tactics unit known as SWAT.

Abortion fund ban is lifted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to let Congress immediately cut off all federal Medicaid funds for abortions deemed not necessary to save the lives of mothers.

At the same time, the justices ordered a lower court to review the constitutionality of the abortion funding ban, the so-called Hyde amendment.

The court's action means the federal government must, for the time being, continue spending Medicaid money for abortions sought by poor women.

The court turned down a request by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., for whom the amendment was named, and others asking it to authorize an immediate end to federal funding for most abortions.

The justices, without comment, sent the federal funding for abortions question back to U.S. District Judge John Dooling in Brooklyn, N.Y., for study in light of the high court's recent ruling that states have no legal obligation to pay for medically unnecessary abortions.

Last Monday, the court ruled that states have no legal obligation to pay for the elective abortions of poor women. Antiabortion forces have interpreted that ruling to apply to federal funding as well.

But proabortion attorneys have argued that the 1976 Hyde amendment went beyond the rationale used in the court's decisions on state funding.

Congress last October tacked on the Hyde amendment to an appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

It prohibited the expenditure of federal Medicaid money for any abortion, therapeutic or elective, except in those instances in which the life of the mother would be jeopardized by the childbirth.

House rejects move to roll back $12,900 pay hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House refused today to roll back a $12,900 pay raise members of Congress received this year and corresponding pay raises received by more than 20,000 other officials and employes.

The House defeated an amendment to the legislative appropriation bill that would have cut out funds for the raise. Thus it reaffirmed with a recorded vote the increase that went into effect in March without such a vote.

Opponents of the pay raise argued that the method by which it was put into effect was shabby, and that Congress should not protect itself against an inflation it helped cause.

But supporters said the increase, only the second in eight years, did not even keep pace with the rising cost of living or the level of business salaries.

House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill was applauded when he argued that the House had adopted, to accompany the pay raise, an ethics code whose "heart and soul was full financial disclosure and a limitation of 15 per cent on outside earned income."

The March pay raise went into effect automatically without the need for a vote. It raised the salaries of congressmen and senators from $44,600 to $57,500 and included pay increases for the vice president, Cabinet members, other high officials and top civil servants and federal judges.

The House Democratic leadership, fighting to preserve the pay raise, sought approval of procedures that would make any amendment to roll back the increase apply to all recipients except the judges. The Constitution protects judges against having their pay reduced during their terms.

Many congressmen indicated that if the congressional salaries could be linked to those of the federal employes who received raises at the same time, the House members would find it easier to justify a refusal to give back their raises. They could say they were simply thinking of all those deserving federal executives.

Members of the House were also in line for another pay hike, a cost-of-living increase, on Oct. 1. But on a 397-20 vote Tuesday, the House sent to President Carter a bill denying the cost-of-living raise to anyone who received the big March increase.

The cost-of-living raise has not been computed but is expected to be about 6.3 per cent, which would have amounted to about $3,500 for members of Congress.

Teasdale to move on prison deadlock

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale said today he plans "to have contact made this week" with the two leaders of the House and Senate to begin work on a resolution of the deadlock on construction of a new state prison.

"We have to start work right away to see if we can resurrect a prison plan," Teasdale told newsmen. "I have to look to the leaders of the General Assembly to work something out."

The governor's comments came after Sen. Donald Manford, D-Kansas City, the man who led the Senate forces in setting up the deadlock, said he felt it was up to the governor and the leaders of the two houses to work out a compromise.

The 1977 session of the legislature adjourned without reaching agreement on the the controversial prison site issue.

The House, along with Teasdale and state corrections officials, supported the proposal for a medium security facility in Kansas City and St. Louis, while the Senate held out for a new maximum security prison in mid-Missouri.

The failure of the lawmkaers to reach agreement on the prison site blocked passage of the $125 million capital construction bill, which contained money for the repair and construction of other buildings around the state.

Although a special session to resolve the problem has been suggested, Manford said Teasdale would have to get together with House Speaker Kenneth Rothman, D-Clayton, and Sen. Norman Merrell, D-Monticello, the president pro tem of the Senate, to try and work out toward a compromise.

Although Manford led the forces opposed to the medium security plan he downplayed his role in any special session discussions.

"I think it's up to Gov. Teasdale and Mr. Rothman and Sen. Merrell to get together on it," Manford said in an interview.

OPEC majority opts not to raise prices

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A majority of members in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — OPEC — have decided to cancel plans for a 5 per cent increase in the price of crude oil July 1, the OPEC secretary general announced today.

The 13-member oil cartel has been split over prices since last December when 11 members called for a two-stage 15 per cent price hike for 1977. The other two members, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, opted for a 5 per cent increase for the whole year.

The 10 per cent increase imposed Jan. 1 by the cartel majority raised the price of their crude oil to $12.70 a barrel. The second stage of the increase was to have gone into effect July 1.

Ali M. Jaidah, the secretary-general, said in a brief statement that the decision to cancel the increase was made "in the interest of unity and solidarity of OPEC."

"The following countries of the organization — Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Kuwait, Nigeria, Qatar and Venezuela — have resolved to forego the application of the additional 5 per cent increase in the price of oil as of July 1, 1977," the statement said.

The other two members are Libya and Iraq.

Hamid Zaheri, the OPEC information department chief who phoned the statement to news agencies, said "I have nothing to add to it."

He specifially declined to say why Libya and the Iraq did not go along with the decision of the other nine, and what action the remaining two OPEC members — Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates — would take.

There was speculation that Libya and Iraq would go ahead with the additional 5 per cent increase July 1.

Prices charged by Saudi Arabia and the UAR are still 5 per cent lower than those charged by the other members.

Woman, 22, killed in I-70 accident

MARSHALL JUNCTION — A 22-year-old Junction City, Kan., woman was killed and her one-year-old daughter injured in a one-car accident on Interstate 70 about 2 miles east of Highway 65 shortly before 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Mary L. Howard, identified as the driver of the car, was killed and her daughter, Patricia, suffered head injuries. The girl was listed in good condition at the University of Missouri-Columbia Medical Center Wednesday.

According to the Highway Patrol, Mrs. Howard apparently lost control of her eastbound Volkswagen. The vehicle rolled over three times.

Minimum competency testing Rx for students?

By DONALD L. FRUEHLING

Do pupils who graduate from high school have the minimum competencies in reading and math skills needed to cope with the normal complexities of everyday life? There is growing belief among educators and the public that they do not.

A 1976 bulletin of the National Association of Secondary School Principals noted:

"Many citizens . . . feel that despite heavy expenditures the educational gains are negligible at best. What is the purpose, the public asks, of sending students to school for 12 years if upon graduation they cannot read well or compute accurately? Schools are being asked to account for the quality of their products? Citizens want measurable results for the education dollars spent."

The problem has become so serious that according to a recent Gallup Poll, a 2 to 1 majority of Americans believe the quality of education is declining. They want schools to devote more emphasis to the teaching of basic skills — reading, mathematics, and writing. An even greater proportion want high school students to pass a standard "minimum competency" test before receiving a high school diploma.

Minimum competency means more than an ability to read. It indicates an ability to react competently to the normal demands of daily life, such as filling in applications, balancing bank accounts, and reading recipes, warranties, newspaper articles, and other commmon features of modern life.

In a world where the fulfillment of our basic needs results increasingly from complicated interactions with large institutions and agencies, acquiring these kinds of skills is basic to survival.

Testing students to assure mastery of skills is hardly a novel idea. The New York State Board of Regents has mandated high school examination in specific subject areas since 1865; in 1877 the Regents made explicit the purpose of these exams, to "furnish a suitable standard of graduation."

In more recent years, increasing numbers of states and cities have recognized the necessity of assuring that every student can meet minimum standards before being certified a high school graduate. At the close of 1976, seven states had enacted minimum competency legislation, and another nine states had taken administrative action within the state department of education mandating some form of minimum standards. Since January of 1977, 10 more states have introduced legislation on this issue.

Minimum competency testing is frequently associated with the "back-to-basics" movement in education. However, the need for such testing is the parallel trend toward more experimental, free-form educational systems. California assembly member Gary Hart, who introduced that state's bill establishing "proficiency-based" educational norms, has noted that the openness and flexibility of many current experimental programs require a universal mode of measuring students' mastery of essential skills — skills whose acquisition can no longer simply be assumed from the titles of the courses taken by a particular student.

It is important to point out that the purpose of minimum competency tests is not punishment, but diagnosis. The tests are designed, not to prevent students from graduating, but to assure that they graduate — and that their graduation indicates readiness for adult life. Tests must be administered early enough in a student's career to identify areas of weakness and prescribe drill work, tutoring, or other appropriate remedial remedial measures. In many localities, students take the competency exam several times during their high school years, until they have passed all the required skill sections.

The Los Angeles Unified School District, for example, has developed a new reading proficiency test called SHARP —Senior High Assessment of Reading Performance. Designed to measure the reading "survival skills" of Los Angeles students, the test helps to determine which students need further training before they can graduate.

The SHARP test is typical of tests being developed to measure minimum competency. These tests familiarize students with documents and forms they are likely to encounter in everyday life, such as rent receipts, membership applications, voter registration forms, unemployment and job applications.

In an increasingly complex and competitive world, we cannot afford to turn our children out into the world unprepared to cope with the demands of their environment. Nor would we want the school system we pay for to get less than optimal results. Minimum competency testing serves the interests of the taxpayer, the employer, and most of all, the interests of America's 50 million students. (NEA)

More rioting possible, NAACP executive warns

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The ghetto riots of the 1960s could return within the next decade because conditions that led to those uprisings have not been changed, a civil rights leader said Tuesday.

Herbert Hill, national labor director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the economic status of black Americans is declining.

"There is a deceptive calm in the black ghettos of this country, and that's the potential for future trouble," he said. "All pressures leading to the ghetto rebellions of the 1960s are in operation."

The Carter administration's efforts at reducing unemployment have been "limited and totally inadequate, given the critical nature of black unemployment," Hill said.

"Black people should start to raise hell in an organized, orderly fashion over unemployment," he told delegates to the NAACP's 68th annual convention.

NOTICE TO TELEPHONE CUSTOMERS

We are planning changes in the rates for calls to Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, and changes in the rates for some mainland interstate calls.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has filed a new schedule of rates with the Federal Communications Commission which decreases the charges for all dial-direct calls to Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, and increases charges for some Long Distance calls made interstate in the continental U.S.

The Company has asked that the new rate schedule for U.S. offshore points become effective July 1, 1977. The new rates are designed to more closely align rates for calls to Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands with the current rates for all interstate Long Distance calls within the forty-eight contiguous states. The charges for some continental interstate Long Distance calls would go up effective September 13, 1977. The combined effect of the above rate actions is designed to provide approximately a zero revenue change in Bell's estimated interstate Message Telecommunications Service revenues for this phase of rate integration.

The new rate schedules and supporting data have been filed with the Federal Communications Commission.

■ Basic charges for initial minutes for all calls within the contiguous forty-eight states remain unchanged. Additional per-minute charges will increase by one cent or less for out-of-state calls up to 431 miles.

■ In order to bring the charges for calls to Alaska and Hawaii more closely in line with the charges for similar calls made between the contiguous forty-eight states, the charges for the average call to Alaska and Hawaii (based on past usage) will now be reduced by 29% and 25% respectively.

■ Charges for calls to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands will be reduced as a result of restructuring and reducing the rates between the U.S. mainland and these points. Rates will be revised so that they are structured in the same way as the rates for interstate mainland calls. Charges will vary dependent upon the distance covered by the call and by the time of day and day of the week, and dependent upon whether or not the call is operator assisted. These changes in rates for calls to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands will result in a decrease of about 24% in the charge for the average call based on prior usage.

The following examples illustrate the new Long Distance rates between U.S. mainland and the offshore localities indicated:

Missouri town has its own magician

By JENELL WALLACE
Springfield Daily News

MARSHFIELD, Mo. (AP) — This southwest Missouri town of almost 3,000 has its own magician-in-residence.

He's Randy Schroder, a 16-year-old high school junior who's been dabbling in magic since he was 7.

Traveling throughout the southwest Missouri Ozarks, young Schroder puts on magic shows at schools and club meetings. He doesn't have a top hat. And instead of a shapely female assistant, his helper is a male high school student dressed in tennis shoes and jeans.

Schroder's act has magic because of Schroder himself.

"I like to entertain people and make them happy," he says. The audience at a Springfield elementary school was enchanted by Schroder's performance.

Not only does Schroder perform standard magic tricks, involving a myriad of scarves, rubber balls and doves, he uses psychology to draw a strong audience reaction.

"As long as they think they've caught the trick, that really makes them yell," he says.

The children did yell when they thought they caught the magician's mistake.

Schroder put a dove in a wooden box placed on a table. A feather appeared under the table. As Schroder blithely pretended to make the dove disappear, his audience shrieked and pointed at the feather. He dismantled the box and took a cloth off the table. When he turned it upside down, there was no dove.

A chorus of "oh's" arose from the audience.

Schroder is mastering the art of audience control. He handles his audience with patience and politeness.

"If you can't amaze them with the tricks you're doing, you just tell them to settle down," he says. "You can do it nicely."

Schroder was scarcely older than his audience when he became interested in magic. At age 7, he started reading books about magic. And the 8-year-old Randy Schroder figured out a trick for each member of his Cub Scout den to perform in a talent show.

Schroder taught himself most of his tricks. He works hard at perfecting the mysterious feats.

"Whenever I don't work, I'm usually practicing. I hardly ever watch TV or anything," he says.

Schroder holds down a lifeguard's job and also works at an ice cream drive-in. This summer he plans to build a huge telescope.

While college and a possible career in a science field may occupy his future, Randy Schroder will continue to learn new magic tricks.

"No matter how old you get, you're still in the experimental stage," he said.

According to National Geographic Society, no one knows the origins of the inhabitants of Madagascar, the world's fourth largest island.

Arthur Hayes

Arthur Hayes, 78, 604 North Prospect, died at his home Tuesday.

The body is at the Ewing Funeral Home. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Harry Emerson Hall

SWEET SPRINGS — Harry Emerson Hall, 67, died at 6:15 a.m. Tuesday at the Fitzgibbon Hospital, Marshall, following a long illness.

He was born March 26, 1910, at Sweet Springs, son of Ben F. and Nellie Mae Cox Hall. He married Pauline Still Jan. 25, 1949, in Sweet Springs and she he survives of the home.

Mr. Hall served as a sales tax representative for the state of Missouri for eight years. A lifelong Democrat, he was appointed an honorary colonel for two terms by former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes. He was also a member of the First Christian Church, Sweet Springs; Barbee Lodge 217, Sweet Springs; Order of the Eastern Star No. 90, Sweet Springs; York Rite and Triangle Shrine 36, both of Marshall and the Ararat Shrine, Kansas City.

Other survivors include one son, William F. Hall, Tacoma, Wash., and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at the James-Berg Chapel here, with the Rev. Paul D. Burton officiating and the Rev. Thelma Case assisting.

Active pallbearers will be Harry Smith, William Neece, Bob Sevier, Cecil Jacobi, Eugene Price and Charles J. Crain. Honorary pallbearers will be Russell Whitlock, Fred Rose, Emery Vatter, Jake Hartman, Henry Hoff and J.C. Dillion.

Masonic services will be held at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the chapel.

Burial will be in the Fairview Cemetery here.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at the chapel.

Marvin M. Buford Sr.

WARRENSBURG — Marvin M. Buford Sr., 67, a former Sedalian, died Wednesday morning at Johnson County Memorial Hospital here.

He was born Oct. 13, 1909, at Grand Pass, Mo., son of Frank and Jane Edwards Buford. On July 9, 1949, he married Verneta Fischer in Sedalia, and she survives of the home here.

Mr. Buford was graduated from Bunceton High School. He lived in Sedalia for about 15 years, moving to Warrensburg in 1952. He worked for the Howard Concrete Co., retiring in 1974.

Mr. Buford attended Bethlehem Lutheran Church here and was an Army veteran of World War Two.

Also surviving is a son, Marvin M. Buford Jr., of the home.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the church with the Rev. Roger Beese officiating.

Burial will be in Nelson Cemetery.

The body is at the Sweeney-Phillips Funeral Home here.

Mrs. Luanna Wisner

PILOT GROVE — Funeral services for Mrs. Luanna Wisner, 101, who died Tuesday morning at a Boonville nursing home, will be held at 2:30 p.m. Thursday at the Painter-Woodard Funeral Home here with the Rev. Earl Hoskins officiating.

Burial will be in the Mt. Nebo Cemetery here.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at the funeral home.

Mrs. Paula Gieschen

COLE CAMP — Funeral services for Mrs. Paula Gieschen, 72, who died at 12:45 a.m. Tuesday at the Good Samaritan Nursing Home here, will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at Holy Cross Lutheran Church northeast of here with the Rev. Richard Lindeman officiating.

Burial will be in the church cemetery.

The family will receive friends from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at the Fox Funeral Home here, where a prayer service will be held at 9 p.m.

Murder trial is moved here

An elderly Ionia man will be tried on capital murder charges in Pettis County Circuit Court. Although Walter Crumper's trial date has not been set, the case will be heard here because Crumper, 77, was granted a change of venue from Benton County, where the alleged incident took place.

In the petition requesting the change, Crumper said he could not receive a fair trial in the 30th Judicial Circuit, a five-county area including Benton County, because of pre-trial publicity in the case.

Crumper is charged with the July 10 shooting death of a Lincoln police officer. Crumper allegedly shot and killed Harold LeRoy Reeves, 59, as the officer sat in his patrol car on Main Street in Lincoln.

Crumper was arrested July 11 in connection with the incident, which allegedly stemmed from a disagreement on a dog control problem between the officer and Crumper.

Accroding to the Benton County sheriff's department, Crumper is now a patient at the state hospital in Fulton.

Farmer can't figure out how he got disease

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Otho C. Wilson, a farmer in the Missouri Ozarks who hasn't been more than 50 miles from home in six months, has no idea how he contracted Legionnaires Disease.

Wilson's farm is at the end of a county road near Beaver Creek, "down there where nobody else can get. It's pretty rough country." He lists his hometown as Good Hope, which doesn't even appear on state maps.

But despite his limited contacts with the outside world, the communicable Disease Center in Atlanta has confirmed the illness which struck him May 29 in his hay field was Legionnaires Disease, the mysterious ailment that killed 29 persons connected with a state American Legion convention in Philadelphia last July and afflicted 151 others.

Wilson, 51, was unconcious for almost two weeks and lost 40 pounds through the ordeal. His temperature reached 103 in the first few days of the illness, but he is now recovering and plans to go home Friday.

In the past six months his farthest venture from the farm in the rugged Missouri Ozarks was to Springfield to buy cattle feed.

He was baling hay when he began feeling ill.

"I didn't have much time to think what I had."

Two days later he was taken by his family to a local hospital.

He said the local hospital "decided that there was nothing they could do" and transferred him to another hospital which eventually sent him to St. John's Hospital in Springfield.

State health officials, who confirmed the case as Legionnaires Disease through federal authorities in Atlanta, said they now suspect the disease is transmitted by organisms attached to dust particles. The CDC in Atlanta says the disease is caused by a previously unknown bacteria-like organism.

Skelton planning to be in office here

U.S. Rep. Ike Skelton will be in his district office in the local Federal Building from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. July 8 to meet with constituents, it was announced Wednesday.

Appointments to meet with Skelton are not necessary, but are encouraged. The phone number for Skelton's local office is 826-2675.

Discussing her husband

Gwen Newton, wife of jailed American Black Panther leader Huey Newton, talks with reporters Wednesday outside the Brampton, Ontario, jail where a deportation hearing for her husband was in progress. The hearing was later adjourned until Monday. Newton arrived in Canada Saturday from Cuba reportedly to spend 10 days in the country before surrendering to U.S. authorities.

Birth control device may be on market soon

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — A birth control device that will allow women to use the rhythm method as successfully as the pill and suffer no side effects may be on the market in two years, researchers says.

The device, called an ovutimer, can also be used to tell women who want to conceive when they are most fertile, the developers say.

"There are no side effects," said Dr. Louis Kopito, a research scientist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "It's like putting in a thermometer and taking it out again."

The rhythm method is a birth control technique in which women avoid intercourse during ovulation. However, since the time of ovulation often varies, the method fails about 30 per cent of the time.

The ovutimer is a seven-inch-long plastic device. The researchers say it makes the rhythm method accurate, because it tells women when sperm can get past their natural defenses and make them pregnant.

"Our first market will be women who are trying to get pregnant," said Kopito. "There are six million in the United States who want to have babies but cannot, and they are very highly motivated.

"Another group is those who cannot take the pill but want to limit family size."

Kopito and two physicians have been working on the device for 11 years. They plan to ask the Food and Drug Administration for approval this fall to begin testing the reliability of the method on women who are members of family planning organizations.

If these tests are successful, he said, the device should be on the market in the United States in early 1979. Another version will be available to gynecologists in Europe by the end of this year.

The device measures the stickiness of cervical mucous. Scientists have discovered that during ovulation, the mucous becomes thin and watery so that the sperm can pass through it easily.

Kopito cautioned that no birth control device is absolutely accurate. "We want to be somewhere within the range of the pill (about 93 per cent effective)," he said.

He said the method would cost about the same as birth control pills. The plastic sampling device will sell for about $10, and a set of two disposable testing plates will cost 25 cents.

Kopito said the device should be acceptable to the Roman Catholic Church, which opposes birth control methods that chemically or physically block conception.

Theft check still underway

A loss estimate is still unavailable from the Sunday night burglary of Goodheart's Jewelers, 216 South Ohio.

A spokesman for the store told The Democrat-Capital Wednesday that an inventory of the store's merchandise was still underway and it was not known when it would be completed.

The thieves chopped a hole in the roof of the business about 11:20 p.m. Sunday, bypassed the burglar alarm and then opened a safe taking its contents.

The business advertised in The Democrat-Capital that any customers who made purchases at the store on June 25 and paid by checks should stop payment on the checks and advise the store.

Police reported Tuesday they were looking into a lead on a car that was seen in the neighborhood of the business near the time of the break-in. Nothing new has developed with this lead, according to police.

New York eases marijuana laws

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Casual marijuana smokers will face fines rather than jail terms the first two times they are caught under a measure passed early today and sent to Gov. Hugh Carey.

Carey has said he will sign the bill.

Months of political maneuvering and three hours of sometimes emotional debate preceded the 32-28 midnight roll call in the state Senate. The Assembly passed the bill Monday night.

The bill would make private possession of 25 grams — about eight-tenths of an ounce — punishable by fines of $100 to $250. Those caught would not get criminal records as a result.

But there would be jail terms on the third offense. Sentences for possession of larger amounts or for sale would also be reduced.

Sen. Douglas Barclay, R-Oswego, the sponsor of the measure, told his fellow senators that the arrest of thousands of pot smokers needlessly tied up the resources of courts and police.

Truman Library may be expanded

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — The General Services Administration says it expects to receive congressional approval for a $2.6 million, 24,000-square-foot addition to the Truman Library and Museum.

Dr. Benedict K. Zobrist, library director, said the addition would allow display of more of the 13,000 items in the Truman collection. Currently, only 3,000 are displayed.

tenative budget approved Tuesday and the final budget to be approved July 12.

In other action, Keithly told the board he is exploring the possibility of reselling bonds used to finance the junior high school. He said that reduced interest rates possible in the resale could save the district as much as $172,000 in interest payments.

Under the current bond agreement, interest rates will hover around 6 per cent until the bonds are retired in 1990. Current interest rates on school bonds are about 5 per cent, said Keithly.

Parkhurst bid to rezone land being opposed

The Planning and Zoning Commission will consider two requests, one of them expected to be controversial, when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Municipal Building council chambers.

One request is by William R. Parkhurst, who seeks to have land immediately east and west of his manufacturing plant No. 1 on West Broadway rezoned from R-1 (single family residential) to M-1 (light industrial). Parkhurst said Tuesday he wants the land rezoned because he plans to eventually expand his manufacturing operations. This expansion, he noted, would create 100 more local jobs.

However, opposition to the Parkhurst proposal has reportedly surfaced among homeowners in the area. A letter urging residents to oppose the proposal was distributed in the neighborhood recently. A petition to this effect also is being distributed, it was reported.

Told of this opposition, Parkhurst said Tuesday, "If they (surrounding property owners) oppose this, they will be against creating new jobs."

In another hearing, the commission will review a request that hearing aid businesses in the city should be classified in the category of C-0 (non-retail) zoning. This category now covers such places as accountants offices, real estate firms, architectural firms, engineers offices and lawyers offices.

This change is being requested by Harry Young, who operates the Beltone Hearing Aid sales and service office in the State Fair Shopping Center. Young hopes to move his business to a property at Ninth and Park, which is now zoned R-1 (single family residential).

When Young applied to have this property rezoned, he was told that it would have to be rezoned C-1 (local business). He is now seeking to have his business classified under C-0 in an effort to enhance his chances of having the property rezoned.

Young's rezoning request has been continued pending the outcome of the zoning classification question which will probably be acted on Thursday night.

Economic indicators take dive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its index of economic indicators declined in May for the first time in four months, possibly indicating some slowing in the rate of economic growth in months ahead.

The Commerce Department said its so-called composite index of leading indicators decreased two-tenths of 1 per cent in May. While that was a small decline, it followed increases of five-tenths of 1 per cent in April, 2 per cent in March and nine-tenths of 1 per cent in February.

The index, which is a composite of 12 individual economic statistics, is designed to foreshadow future trends in the economy.

The May decline, however, will not be taken too seriously by government and private economists since most feel it takes at least three months of upward or downward movements in the index to establish a trend.

There has been other evidence that the steady economic growth under way since late winter may be slowing somewhat. Steel producers have reported a decline of orders in recent weeks and retail sales by major department stores have been disappointing in June.

Six of the 10 individual statistics in the indicators index were negative in May. Contributing most to the decline was a drop in the money supply.

Also negative during the month were the job layoff rate, up to 1.1 per cent from 1 per cent in April; sales performance; changes in cash and other liquid assets; changes in sensitive prices, and stock prices.

Partially offsetting these declines were gains in the average work week to 40.4 hours from 40.2 hours in April; contracts and orders for plants and equipment; new orders for manufactured and consumer goods, and building permit

The over-all index stood at 130.6 per cent of 1967 average of 100. The prerecession high for the index was 133.7 in June of 1973.

Special meeting on cable TV rate

A request by Total Television Ltd. to raise its local monthly cable television rates from $6.15 to $6.65 will be considered by the City Council in a special meeting at 7:30 tonight in the Municipal Building.

Company officials will also request that service charges be keyed to inflation and that they take effect without council approval.

Carter: odds good for talks with Brezhnev

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said today he hoped the chances for a meeting with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev were good but said he did not know whether he would meet with the Soviet leader this year.

The President made his comments to reporters after his foreign policy assistant said Carter and Brezhnev were certain to meet but refused say whether such a session would take place this year.

The President spoke with reporters outside the Oval Office after concluding talks with Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez.

Asked whether the chances for a meeting with Brezhnev were "pretty good," Careter replied "I hope so."

Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, told reporters that "at some point, it's certain they'll meet."

Asked whether conditions of the U.S.-Soviet relationship were proper for a summit between the two leaders, Brzezinski said "the climate is all right."

The relationship, he said, "is partially cooperative, partially competitive, but it is stable."

"There is steady movement," he said.

But, asked whether he would guess that a summit might take place this year, Brzezinski said "I don't want to guess. I don't get paid for guessing. I get fired for guessing."

The White House said on Tuesday that both Carter and Brezhnev expressed a desire to meet.

In addition, Brzezinski and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin last week discussed the possibility of a meeting.

Northern trade unions scare foreign firms attracted to U.S.

London Economist
News Service

CLEVELAND — Nearly one third of all announced foreign investments in manufacturing in the United States are made in the Southeast. Why? Mostly because unions are feeble and wage rates comparatively low.

"Foreigners are terrified about being unionized," says Robert Will, an economic geographer at the Austin Company of Cleveland, Ohio, who has helped a score of European companies to find sites in the United States. He thinks they are unnecessarily paranoid, and tells them so.

American industrialists agree. They reckon foreign companies sometimes overlook high distribution costs when they are beguiled into investing in the South by cheap land deals, effusive politicians and their own fears about the militancy of American unions.

Left in the dust are the heavily unionized states of the Mideast region, which takes in such industrial heavyweights as New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and of the great lakes, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio among them.

For most of this century they have clawed in a lion's share of foreign investment, yet between 1968 and 1975 the Mideast share dropped to 17.7 per cent and that of the great lakes to 13.6 percent.

Canadian companies setting up plants just across the border to serve both their own and the American market help to stop this from shrinking further. Take New York. Its commerce department estimates that $20 million of the $29 million invested by foreigners in the state last year came from Canadian companies.

American industrialists agree that textile, apparel and shoe investments in Dixie make sense. The region's low wage costs, plus those import quotas camouflaged as "orderly marketing agreements," give these labor-intensive industries a chance to compete against Far East and Mediterranean rivals. Energy investments in the South are also rated sound since Texas, Louisiana and Alabama are the hub of the American fuel and petrochemical industries.

Not so, though, for such things as tires. Michelin of France is described as eccentric, and worse, for swerving far away from its competitors, clustered around Akron, Ohio, and its customers, the car companies headquartered in Detroit, in setting up its United States factories in South Carolina, a state where only 8 per cent of the non-agricultural workers are union members.

True, this has permitted Michelin to escape the clutches of the United Rubber Workers union and to pay its workers lower wages than those paid by Goodyear, Firestone, B. F. Goodrich, Uniroyal and the rest, but it may be only a temporary reprieve.

Chances are the union will eventually catch up with Michelin, especially if the textile union's drive in the Carolinas is a successful wedge.

Still, for the time being at least, southern states are going great guns in battling for foreign investors, and quote incessantly from a "business climate" study prepared by Fantus Company, the industrial consultancy division of Dun and Bradstreet, the credit rating agency.

When it decided the balminess, or otherwise, of the business climate in the 48 mainland states, this study took account of such corporate meteorological factors as taxes, labor laws, unemployment costs, welfare costs and state indebtedness.

The states that came out best were, in order, Texas, Alabama, Virginia, South Dakota, South Carolina, North Carolina, Florida and Arkansas. All, not coincidentally, are among the minority of states that have enacted so called "right-to-work" laws that make the job of a union organizer very hard.

At the other extreme, New York was rated the least attractive state for business followed by California, Massachusetts, Michigan and Delaware (in that order).

The most skilled angler for foreign investment has been South Carolina. Around 70 companies — Hoechst of Germany, Sandoz of Switzerland, Michelin of France and ICI of Britain among them — have been landed by a blend of southern charm and northern hucksterism.

The South Carolina development board conducts free special surveys for would-be investors on land, markets, natural resources and so on. It recruits and trains workers for them at no cost, arranges financing and negotiates building contracts.

English lessons are laid on at local schools for foreign children, local shops nudged into stocking foreign cheeses and wines, and to impress prospective investors they are fetched into South Carolina by private jet and chauffeured around the state in impressively large limousines.

Other states have countered by doing this, and more. Tax breaks are now commonplace and 24 states have set up European offices, seven Japanese offices, to badger potential investors.

The northern states are catching on. Jealous rivals (Ohio among them) complain Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania offered to do everything but turn the state assembly into a car showroom when he put together a $71 million deal to persuade Volkswagen to hop its Rabbits off an assembly line in New Stanton, 38 miles from downtown Pittsburgh.

The unions, though, could do more than any northern state governor to level the odds in this battle between the states if they ever win their perennial campaign to persuade the Congress to repeal section 14 (b) of the Taft-Hartley act, which permits states to pass right-to-work laws. Thomas (Tip) O'Neill, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, agrees the unions are right, but does not plan just now to do anything to help them: "It's an old rule of politics that you should not field the team unless you can win."

Meat, egg prices rise, survey notes

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - The retail prices for beef, pork and eggs were up this week, according to the weekly survey of food prices by the Missouri Farm Bureau.

Among beef cuts, round steak showed the greatest increase at 7 cents a pounds to $1.54. The bureau's survey of the average food prices at 50 grocery stores across the state showed sirloin steak up 6 cents a pound to $1.89 and T-bone steak at $2.16-per-pound — a jump of 5 cents a pound.

Beef blade roast was up 2 cents at 88 cents a pound, arm roast at $1.14 a pound, was up by one penny. The only beef cut showing a drop was rib steak, which went down a penny to $1.66 a pound.

Ground beef remained unchanged from the previous week's price of 80 cents a pound.

Center cut chops had the highest price hike among pork prices with a 7-cent-a-pound increase to $1.83 a pound. Both pork steak at $1.24-per-pound and pork blade at $1.18 a pound were higher by 6 cents a pound. Pork shank portions dropped 4 cents to 85 cents a pound, while butt portions remained the same as the week before at $1.06.

Grade A eggs large up 6 cents a dozen to 69 cents and Grade A Medium increased 3 cents to 58 cents a dozen. However, Grade A Extra Large remained unchanged at 69 cents a dozen.

The price of whole frying chikcens at 54 cents a pound and cut up fryers at 63 cents a pound remained unchanged from the previous week.

The price of a gallon of whole milk dropped 2 cents a gallon to $1.63, while 2 per cent milk went down 3 cents to $1.54 cents a gallon.

White bread was up 2 cents for a pound and a half loaf to 65 cents.

A 10 pound bag of red potaotes was down 6 cents to $1.97 and a one pound can of coffee two pennies to $4.21 a pound.

Paying for reputation?

Local attorneys say they won't advertise

By MAX ERKILETIAN
Staff Writer

It is not likely that Monday's Supreme Court decision lifting the prohibition against advertising by lawyers will foster an outcropping of ads by local attorneys.

All Sedalia laywers contacted by The Democrat-Capital say they do not intend to advertise. Most say the ruling is a bad one that may hurt the very person it was intended to help: the consumer.

"I'm inclined to believe it will be a situation where the borderline lawyer is going to spend a good deal of money to solicit clients and get more business than he would otherwise get," said Adam Fischer.

"There's always room for abuse," added Fischer. "The Federal Trade Commission has had to intervene many times to settle what are fair practices in advertising. I'm confident there wouldn't be a problem locally, but I could see where it could be a problem in large cities."

The 5-4 high court ruling specified that lawyers may advertise fees for routine services such as uncontested divorces and drawing up wills. The court, however, made no decision on whether a broader range of legal ads also would have First Amendment protection.

"I am always fearful that there is a chance of unscrupulous attorneys abusing that sort of thing," said Stanley Cox. "There is a great chance of misrepresentation."

Craig Cassing said, "I think the figures used for advertising are going to be used to draw people into offices and they may find that the costs are greater than advertised."

While Robert Gardner can see some potential good effects from the ruling, he concedes it will be difficult to accurately represent fees.

"People say, 'What does a will cost?' and that's a little like saying what does a farm cost," commented Gardner. "You want a will that covers the bare minimum, it won't cost much. But if you want a will that will stand up for 10 generations, it's going to cost more."

Gardner also said he thought advertising might "break the ice" for some people who would not hire an attorney for fear of the expense.

"I have the feeling a lot of people need a lawyer's services and don't take it because they are afraid of the cost," said Gardner. "Most of my clients are regular customers and know my rates, but that is not true for most lawyers in Sedalia. Probably 85 per cent of their business comes from one-time clients."

"Advertising is going to be an added cost of the business we didn't have before and it's going to be included in the bill," said Cassing.

"We get people here calling around to compare the prices of a divorce," added Cassing. "That's fine."

Cassing also questioned the scope of the advertising.

"Where will it end?" he asked. "Will it be all right for an attorney to advertise on the side of an ambulance that he charges so much for personal injury?"

"The profession will have the job of policing it," Cox said of the ruling. "In the past the legal profession didn't have this problem because it simply forbid it. But now it must police advertising. I just think unscrupulous attorneys will mislead clients."

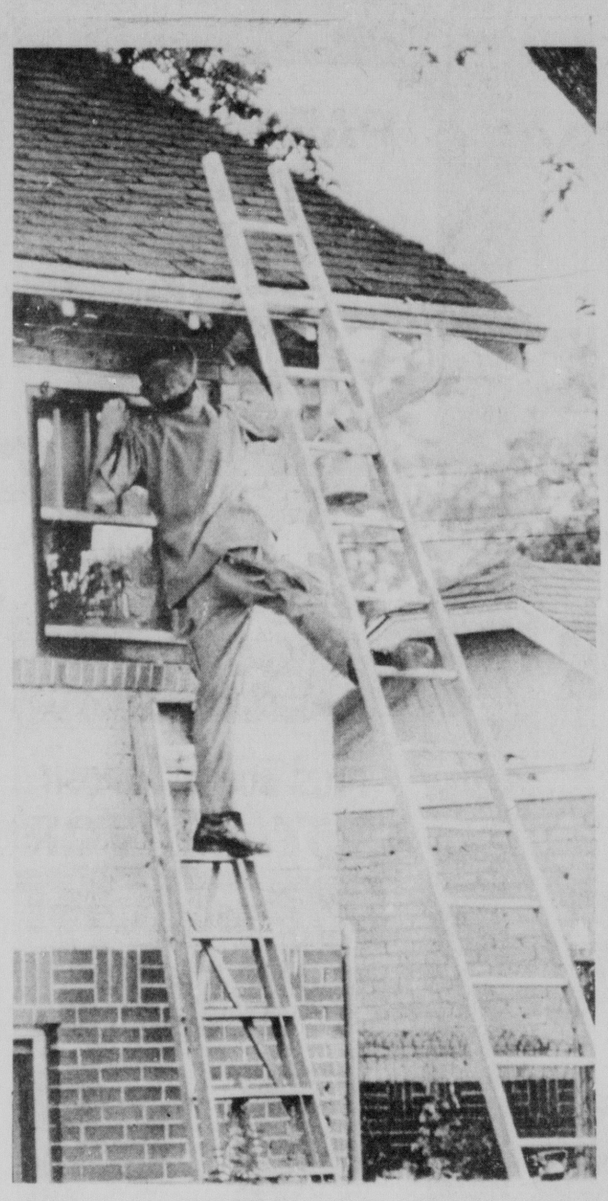

Cox added that he feels advertising will hurt the legal profession.

"I will not advertise in the media unless I am forced to by competition," declared Cox. "I think the ruling will hurt me because I will abstain from advertising.

"It is very difficult in a short concise way, suitable for the media, to explain a legal service," noted Cox. "I think the best way for an attorney to build his practice is through his reputation and this (ruling) will allow you to buy a reputation if you have the money."

"I don't really think it will make things more competetive," said Ken Romines. "I think people are going to go to the attorney they think can do the best job for them."

"I think the consuming public has a right to know what a lawyer is going to cost them, and if this decision does that, I'm all for it," stated Gardner.

NAACP suspends Houston officer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Rev. C. Anderson Davis, executive secretary of the Houston NAACP Metropolitan Council, was suspended Tuesday over charges of fiscal irresponsibility.

The action was taken by the civil rights group's national board of directors, according to board chairman Margaret Bush Wilson.

In addition, the board also placed in trusteeship 11 branches of the Houston NAACP, representing about 3500 members, Mrs. Wilson said.

At a press conference, Mrs. Wilson charged that Davis had violated the association's constitution.

She said Davis, a Baptist minister, would be placed on administrative leave effective June 10 for "conduct inimical to the best interest of the association."

The decision followed an audit of the Houston branch office which Mrs. Wilson said found "grave organizational, managerial and fiscal difficulties."

The audit, she said, could not determine how much money had been used in Houston or if it had been misspent because the branch had failed to keep records of its finances.

Davis later charged that the suspension was part of a "smear campaign" against him.

Hijacker surrenders

DOHA, Qatar (AP) — A man with two hand grenades hijacked a Gulf Air jetliner from London with 68 persons aboard but surrendered Wednesday after the plane landed in Qatar, on the south shore of the Persian Gulf, sources at the Doha airport reported.

The hijacker was believed to be an Arab. The sources said he demanded 500,000 riyals, the equivalent of $194,000, in exchange for the passengers and crew.

All occupants of the plane were reported safe.

The hijacker took over the VC10 airliner during a scheduled flight from London to Muscat, the capital of Oman, on the Arabian peninsula to the east of the entrance to the Persian Gulf.

Wilkins vows to continue active civil rights role

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Roy Wilkins, outgoing leader of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, vowed Tuesday night to remain active in the civil rights movement "as long as there is breath in my body."

"There is unfinished business for us to take care of," Wilkins told some 2,000 NAACP delegates who had gathered to pay tribute to the man who has led the civil rights group for 22 years.

"Let us use every tool at our disposal and every hand on deck — black and white, young and old," he said.

Benjamin J. Hooks, the first black member named to the Federal Communications Commission, was elected last November to replace Wilkins as executive director of the NAACP.

Wilkins, 75, called on black youth to carry on the NAACP struggle after his retirement.

"The NAACP ship is able and steady but we need the imagination, the spirit and the energy of youth to keep us going straight ahead," Wilkins said.

"We need youth who will use their skills in the never-ending struggle to secure a better standard of living for their families and for upgrading the status of the Negro people."

Wilkins was praised as a determined, courageous leader by political and civil rights leaders who attended the tribute, sponsored by the St. Louis NAACP.

Margaret Bush Wilson, chairman of the NAACP's national board of directors, said the NAACP "has survived intact due to the standard of honesty, the standard of determination and the standard of commitment of Roy Wilkins."

"He has been a model for our movement and for our association," Mrs. Wilson said. "In my judgement, he will remain a model."

Missouri governor Joseph P. Teasdale said he hoped Wilkins was optimistic about the future of human rights in Missouri as his active career in the movement ends.

Teasdale praised Wilkins as a leader who "fought for a noble goal — human dignity."

St. Louis Mayor James F. Conway presented Wilkins with a replica of the Gateway Arch and compared him with it and other St. Louis landmarks.

Great cities are often judged by their landmarks, Conway said, but in reality, "it is our people that make cities great."

Among the great people of St. Louis, he said, is "Roy Wilkins — St. Louis-born civil rights leader, whom we honor tonight."

"St. Louis salutes you Roy," the mayor told Wilkins. "We're glad you touched us on the way."

NEW SUMMER HOURS 10 AM-6 PM DAILY

meeting adjourned

Mrs. Douglas Kneibert, Route 2, attended the sixth International Birthright Convention June 24 to 26 at St. Michael's College, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

Most of the 380 Birthright chapters in the United States and Canada were represented at the convention,which covered such topics as legalities and publicity.

Birthright is an organization set up to aid pregnant women. The Sedalia chapter was formed in August, 1976, and has received more than 100 calls in that time.

"One thing that they impressed on us at the convention was that this is serious business," Mrs. Kneibert said. "If we are 15 minutes late into the office and a girl tries to call and can't reach anyone, she may decide to have an abortion."

"They also said that the chapters should not get involved in any other area, other than helping girls who are already pregnant. Some of the chapters have formed homes for unwed mothers or are getting into birth control."

The fourth degree Knights of Columbus held an election of officers Monday.

Adolph Belker was chosen as faithful navigator; John White, faithful captain; Vince Cutler, admiral; Lee Freese, pilot; Dale Fangohr and William Lang, sentinels; Carl Gramlich, scribe; Frank Rouchka, purser.

The Twenter reunion was held June 12 at Pilot Grove Park.

A short meeting was held and the next reunion is planned for the last Sunday in June.

Polly's pointers

Try vinegar on cloudy glass

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — When glassware becomes dull or milky looking I find that one-fourth cup vinegar to one cup of cold water will make it sparkle and cut any film. This also applies to mirrors and windows. — BERTHA.

DEAR POLLY — My shag rug needed cleaning very badly but as I am on Welfare I could not afford to rent a shampooer. I could not stand to look at that rug so I mixed an all purpose household cleaner (powder) in hot water and went to work. I dipped the scrub brush in the solution and then brushed it in the rug going back and forth and then in a circular motion. Next I rubbed vigorously with a clean dry cloth. The shag pile was raised by the use of a ratting comb. When dry it was beautiful and several people thought I had used a shampooer. — CHARLOTTE.

DEAR CHARLOTTE — I would have used a clear rinse water to remove the cleanser but evidently not doing this did no harm to your rug. One should test first for effect on the rug's color. — POLLY.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — What can I do with "on the rocks" glasses that have been washed many times in the dishwasher with all kinds of detergents and are now so cloudy that they are unusable. Nothing seems to work.

Over the years our Oriental rugs have shown many unsightly worn spots but with a large collection of different colored pens I have been able to restore their appearance and have enjoyed being a painter. — GRISELDA.

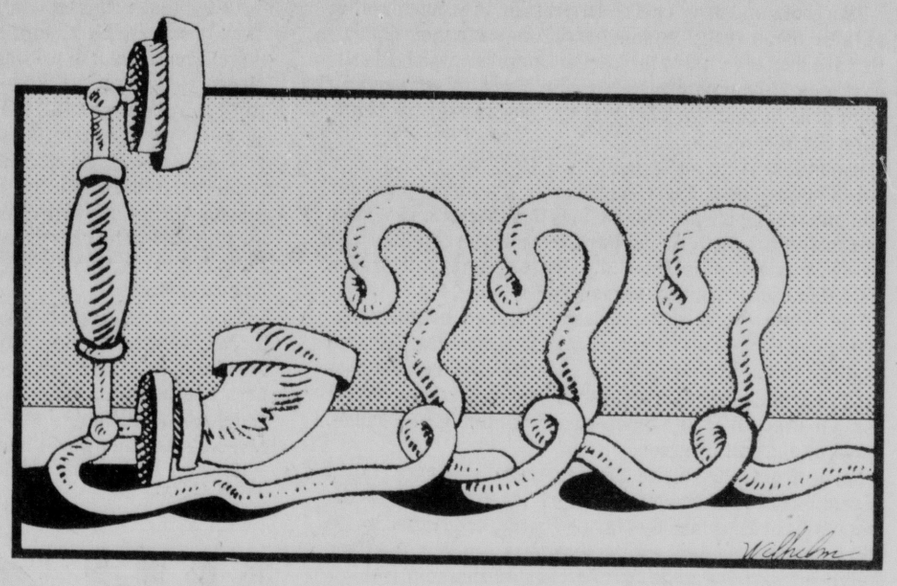

DEAR GRISELDA — I am sure experts would not approve of your method for valuable rugs but when professional repair work is not available or is too expensive you have a point in wanting to make the worn places as invisible as possible.

I hope the above letter from Bertha will help with your glass problem. — POLLY.

(NEA)

If you have a tough question, ask Brigitte

By ROSETTE HARGROVE

PARIS (NEA) — Brigitte de Gastines, a tall, slender, elegant, blonde Parisienne, heads at the age of 40, what amounts to a monumental human encyclopedia on call to 50,000 subscribers, of which 2,000 are private citizens, the remainder public institutions, business enterprises and the press.

The organization she controls is widely known as S.V.P. — French for "if you please", employs 350 people (half women) has 300 telephone lines and three teams of 16 operators manning the big switchboard nonstop from 8:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Her title: President Director General.

S.V.P., started in 1935 by Brigitte de Gastines' father, still is a unique information service which boasts of never allowing a query to go unanswered, however obscure, outrageous or complicated. Four major departments — Technical and Commercial, Juridical and Fiscal, Economy and Finance, Political and Cultural — are represented by experts in manifold branches. S.V.P. also undertakes all queries regarding secretarial work, reproduction of documents, translations in every known language, transmitted by telephone, telex or letter. S.V.P. will organize congresses, seminaries, business trips, vacations, supply tourist information and obtain theater tickets. There are also job-orientation counselors as well as experts on any conceivable situation including personal problems.

Madame de Gastines starts work at 8:30 and seldom leaves her office before 7 p.m. Her husband is on the board of directors. She has two children, a girl, 11, and a boy, 7.

"One thing I am fanatical about," she said with a smile, "is devoting weekends and as much of their vacations as I can to my children." She has little time for "frivolities," is not even mildly interested in fashion per se, but shops here and there in "boutiques" and usually rushes to the hairdresser every 10 days during the noon hour.

Her office is a spacious room, with lofty ceiling, painted in delicate shades of gold, with two French windows. She sits behind a large glass desk and there are several easy chairs and a comfortable couch, all upholstered in soft red-gold calfskin. Family photos are here and there, two large crayon portraits of her children complete a decor which is at once functional and feminine.

S.V.P. is now known to millions of French TV viewers for the simple reason that after a weekly 8:30 p.m. show called the "Dossiers of the Screen" televiewers can call from any part of France to ask any question relating to the film shown — which is usually controversial — and always followed by a round-table discussion among a panel of experts. S.V.P.'s switchboard is available for something like 60 minutes free time while a TV interpreter groups the questions under various headings. Over 450 calls per minute can be handled, toll-free.

Before succeeding to her father, Brigette de Gastines spent 13 years (after passing her baccalaureat) in S.V.P.'s various departments.

"It may seem extraordinary that such a service should flourish in this computerized age," she pointed out. "But my father believed in the personal approach. No computer can replace the human voice. Then, too, we are not only a limitless memory available to everybody but a group of men and women who are there to counsel, assist and cooperate. In short, to establish a dialogue. This formula did not exist anywhere else in the world."

In the last three years, S.V.P. offices have been opened in Switzerland, Italy, Belgium and Great Britain as well as in New York, Toronto, Sydney and Tokyo. There is no set subscription. This is decided according to the function of the subscriber.

Brigitte de Gastines recalled that it was her father who, during World War II, hit upon the idea of taxi-cycles for the transport of Parisians. Today the list of services offered is well above 80. Nothing seems impossible to S.V.P. For example, a subscriber who is also a member of the National Assembly need have no hesitation in calling upon S.V.P. to prepare his speech for his next appearance.

Crazy requests for information are not too frequent but hostesses often call on a question of protocol such as: "I have invited a bishop and a political celebrity to dinner. How do I place them?"

Or a mother: "My three-year old son has swallowed the knob off his music box. What do I do now?"

Another recent caller asked: "Where can I find some mother's milk in a hurry for my baby?"

"What price did Rembrandt's 'Titus' fetch at a sale at Christie's in London in 1965?"

"Will you tell what hairdressers are open on Sunday morning?"

Scarf service

An oversize scarf will do service at the beach as a sarong, serve as a shawl at night and wrap up your hair when it needs it.

Wisely waxed

A little moustache wax applied sparingly to stray eyebrow hairs will keep them in place.

Yearly cost of sustaining the presidency about $230 million

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — According to law, compensation for the president of the United States is $200,000 per annum. He doesn't get it all, however. As is any American, the chief executive is subject to the will of the Internal Revenue Service, and allowing for income taxation Jimmy Carter receives only about $90,000 a year.

But do not weep for the leader. He has other, greater rewards. The U.S. Congress recognizes that the presidency is the most awesome office in the world, and pays its occupants accordingly. Not since Caesar's Rome, perhaps, has any nation bestowed so much in the way of perquisites as has America on its modern presidents.

To begin with, there is the White House, a 142-room monument fixed on 18.3 acres in the heart of some of the most priceless real estate in the world. Conventional wisdom has it that the grounds are worth $90 million or more, and the house, with its impeccable decor and history, is valued at not less than $60 million.

Carter is getting $2,178,000 to manage the residence this year. The money goes for everything from light bulbs to state dinners. And whatever is not covered in the budget is quietly picked up by helpful government agencies; the National Oceanic Survey, for instance, bears the cost of seeing to it the mansion isn't sinking.

The president is attended in the White House by 78 full-time employees. He has five maids, one laundress, one seamstress, one linen supervisor, two cooks, three chefs, one pantry assistant, six heavy duty housepersons, and others. As director of the help, Carter has Rex Scouten, an excop who has been chief White House usher since the 1940s.

Two cooks and three chefs? An assistant in Scouten's office says he "can't really explain the difference in their duties." He says they are vital to the kitchen, however, which is an industrious, 24-hour enterprise, capable of turning out anything from grits to gourami whenever the executive or his family has a Big Mac attack.

In addition to the servants, there is also the service personnel. The president has electricians, carpenters, plumbers and painters on his payroll. Besides this there are two dozen workmen from the National Park Service who carefully hide the security alarms on the White House grounds with azalea, rhododendron and hibiscus greenery.

The White House has a library supplied by American publishing companies. It has a projection room that features first run films. At parties in the eventide an Army, Navy or Air Force band provides orchestral background. For relaxation, the executive has a tennis court, swimming pool, sauna, masseur and putting green.

Aside from the White House, there is Camp David (Franklin Roosevelt called it Shangri-La). It is secured in the mountains of Maryland by Marine guards, and staffed by 150 other employees. Real estate observers say it is a million dollar retreat; the salaries and keep of the employees is estimated to cost another quarter million.

To get from the White House to Camp David, or from anywhere to anywhere, President Carter has 17 planes at his disposal. Herb Upton, who looks after such things, says his employer has two 707 jet passenger planes, one Jet Star executive craft, a jet cargo ship to haul his armored car, and 13 helicopters manufactured by Sikorsky.

As for that armored car, the president has two of them. They are available to him anywhere in the world. Besides these limousines, the presidential motor pool contains 31 ordinary automobiles. Upton says the size of this motor fleet has been reduced by 21 since Carter assumed office; this saves the public yearly leasing fees of $12,000.

Though bold, the vehicular cutback has not significantly reduced the cost of transporting the president. Estimates are that his air fleet is worth $50 million, and the cost of maintaining the planes and cars exceeds $1 million annually. And too, there is fuel use; some of the helicopters cost nearly $500 per hour to operate.

Finally, the president has his personal bureaucracy. He directly controls nearly 600 people, with functioning expenses of $17 million. And he has more than 1000 additional military personnel on his staff, at a cost that is known only to the Defense Department. For incidentals, President Carter receives $1 million for "Unanticipated Needs."

How much is all this worth? Estimates are that the cost of the president's hardware, including residences, is on the high side of $200 million. His official operating budget is almost $22 million. A broad guess as to related perquisites, including costs borne by other agencies, brings the total to something more than $230 million.

And ... this doesn't include the president's expense account. Kick-around cash for Jimmy Carter is established at $50,000 a year; it's just one more thing that makes the burden of the presidency a bit lighter.

Environmental concerns in industry quest

EQC panel develops guidelines

By DAN POTTER
Staff Writer

A special subcommittee of the Environmental Quality Commission met at the home of EQC Chairman Judy Berenyi Tuesday night to develop a set of environmental concerns the commission wants Economic Development Director James Hamm and the Economic Development Board to consider when deciding what type of industry to bring to Sedalia.

Several months ago, Hamm asked the EQC for the set of guidelines. He said the Economic Development Board would take them into consideration when a prospective industry shows an interest in Sedalia and in deciding what types of industry to try to attract to Sedalia.

At that time, the EQC members told Hamm they wanted more than an advisory role, but a recently passed city ordinance governing the EQC prevented its members from investigating any prospective industry's environmental safeguards.

Actually there are four lists the commission will present to Hamm at the Thursday night EQC meeting.

One is an overall list that details certain chemicals used by some industries which the subcommittee believes pose potential environmental hazards for Sedalia.

An example is mercury, which has been linked to brain damage in certain situations.

The list also includes some types of industries the subcommittee believes are not desirable for Sedalia, either because the chemicals they use are hazardous or because the industry might use large quantities of valuable resources.

An example of the later is a paper plant, which is a heavy water user in its manufacturing processes.

Among those industries on the EQC's "avoid" list are chemical plants, for "reasons too numerous to list." The EQC raised some questions last March about the Alcolac chemical plant, currently being constructed in the Sedalia Industrial Air Park.

The other three lists are a breakdown of a list from the economic development director.

The list from Hamm is a study the state did for the Economic Development Board. The study rates what type of industry might be most easily accommodated to Sedalia's geography, current utilities and other factors affecting the location of industry here.

The state list has rated 109 industry types under such criteria, giving a 14 to the industries best-suited for Sedalia, descending to nine for the industry whose plant requirements are not well provided for in the city.

The subcommittee broke this list into three separate lists.

Of the 109 industries listed, the subcommittee made a list of 13 that the members feel are undesirable for Sedalia. The highest rated industry on the 9-14 scale that the members believe should not be solicited for Sedalia is a poultry plant.

The state gave poultry manufacturing a 12 on the scale, but the EQC subcommittee said it was undesirable because it emits a bad odor, consumes too much water, puts some solid wastes in the sewage system that are not decomposed easily and its biological oxygen demand keeps bacteria from breaking down other wastes in the sewage plants here.

The subcommittee made another list of 44 of the 109 industries that were deemed acceptable for Sedalia environmentally. The two industry types the state rated the best for Sedalia, corrugated fiber box manufacturers and sanitary food container makers, were both deemed acceptable by the subcommittee Tuesday.

The remaining 52 industry types on the state list were not rated acceptable or undesirable by the EQC members Tuesday night. Subcommittee chairman Betty Hopkins said the commission would have to have more information on those industries.

An example is an industry that manufactures paints. Mrs. Hopkins said the EQC would probably want to know the specific processes of the company before determining the environmental impact it might have.

The concerns the subcommittee listed Tuesday night will be given to Hamm to forward to the Economic Development Board at the regular EQC meeting Thursday night.

At that meeting the EQC will also hear a report from Hamm on the problem of noise pollution in Sedalia. The commission had designated Hamm to discuss the problem with city officials and report back to the commission.

The EQC also will vote at its Thursday meeting whether to submit to the City Council another ordinance giving the EQC more investigative authority in regard to potential new industries. The council unanimously rejected such a request recently.

The Thursday meeting will take the place of the commission's regular monthly meeting in July, which was scheduled for July 11.

Cainsville votes to increase levy

CAINSVILLE (AP) — A $1 per $100 assessed valuation increase in the Cainsville school district levy was approved Tuesday on a vote of 273-115.

Now this is one big cat

Mrs. Mary Ann Underhill of Ottawa, Ill., struggles to hold her huge male cat, "Charcoal." The animal, thought to be between 3 and 3½ years old, weighs 25 pounds. Mrs. Underhill adopted the feline a couple of years ago. Dr. Clifford Loomis, an Ottawa veterinarian who examined "Charcoal" recently, said, "I've been a veterinarian for 25 years and have probably seen 25,000 cats in that time, and this is the biggest cat I've ever seen." Mary Ann feeds the animal twice a day. He's a little overweight but in good health. (UPI)

Chancellor not talking about move

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC News says anchorman John Chancellor has decided to stay on and sign a long-term contract, but Chancellor's lawyer says it isn't so. Chancellor himself isn't saying anything.

CBS News reportedly has been trying to interest Chancellor in a spot on its news team, perhaps succeeding the retiring Eric Sevareid as news commentator.

Chancellor's Nightly News has been the main ratings challenger to Walter Cronkite on CBS.

An NBC spokesman said Tuesday that Chancellor, who has spent 26 years with NBC, would sign a contract for "more than three years" within a few days.

Chancellor would only say, "ask my lawyer."

The lawyer, Ralph Mann of International Creative Management, said, "We have no deal with NBC...If there is any agreement that has been made, Chancellor and I don't know about it."

Teacher contends he's in 'exile' due to book he had published

A man and his book

Dr. Evan Keliher displays his privately published "New Africa High," which has become an underground classic of sorts among schoolteachers. "I wanted to say something about our schools," says the high school English teacher. "To be candid, our schools aren't worth a damn. They're just a total shambles."

(AP)

EDITOR'S NOTE — He was a social studies teacher in an inner city school. Now he's teaching in another school — transferred, officials said, for his safety. He says it's because of a little book he published at his own expense that's most unflattering to the school system.

By HARRY ATKINS
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — A book which characterizes school administrators as inept and schools as chaotic has become an underground classic of sorts with teachers across the country.

But Detroit school officials, fictionalized in the account, don't think it's accurate, and publishers apparently don't view it as saleable.

The author of "New Africa High" is Dr. Evan Keliher, 45, who was head of social studies at Detroit Mackenzie High until last February, when he began to promote the book on Detroit-area talk shows.

The day after his first appearance on a local radio program, Keliher was transferred to an integrated high school, where he teaches three English courses.

School administrators told the bearded, soft-spoken Keliher, a teacher for 21 years, that he was being transferred from all-black Mackenzie for his "personal safety."

"Actually, I'm in exile," says Keliher, who is white and classifies himself as a "gadfly."

In the 172-page book which he wrote and paid to have published, Keliher uses hyperbole to describe the problems he sees in public high schools. He sees the problems as ranging from inept administrators to violence in the halls to just plain poor education.

"I wanted to say something about our schools," Keliher says. "To be candid, our schools aren't worth a damn. They're just a total shambles."

Things are especially bad in Detroit, he says, where reading and math achievement scores — well below the national average for years — continue to decline.

But Keliher says the problems he describes in "New Africa High" are common in every large city school.

"You could lift the whole staff of Mackenzie and drop them into a Chicago school and they'd never know they had left the block," he says.

Last year Keliher paid the printer of a weekly newspaper $2.25 apiece for the first 550 copies of "New Africa High." He now has sold more than 4,000 copies, mostly by mail, to teachers in places as far away as West Virginia and California.

He still hopes to find a New York publisher, but even now in its third printing, he can't entice an agent to handle the book.

For $3, the reader of "New Africa High" can glean Keliher's views on:

—School board members: "All candidates for the post should be required to pass a sanity test — if they manage to get by the literacy test."

—Incorrigible students: "We must recognize there are a few students (40,000 or so) who are truly incorrigible and should not be allowed to attend school with real kids."

—Sex: "I would urge we pay more attention to sex in public schools, but the kids really don't seem to need any encouragement."

—Parent-Teacher groups: "These people should not be permitted on school property — even as visitors."

—Truancy: "Pay every kid $10 a day to come to school."

—Grades: "Personally, I pass every kid who doesn't hit me."

"I don't have many solutions in the book," Keliher says, "But I didn't intend to. I was just trying to call attention to the problem. Something should be done about it. But as long as school administrators go around saying things are fine, nothing's going to be done about it."

Bruce Carr, a teacher at Mackenzie, describes Keliher as "competent, popular among students" and says his transfer "has become a joke at school."

It's no joke with Helen Moore. Mrs. Moore is head of Black Parents for a Quality Education, and her group wants Keliher fired.

Mrs. Moore despises the street dialect and speech patterns Keliher attributes to black students in "New Africa High."

"Every child that speaks in his book is put down because of the way he says they talk," Mrs. Moore says, "and they do not talk that way."

The students, however, had a different reaction.

Dan Wallace, a ninth grader who was sent to Keliher once for discipline, thinks "he's a cool dude."

Wallace adds: "It seems that every time we get a good teacher who's trying to do something for us, the school's administration tries to get rid of him."

Concert band to emphasize the patriotic

The Sedalia Concert Band will emphasize patriotic songs when it presents its fifth concert of the season at 8 p.m. Thursday at Liberty Park.

For the first half of the program, the band will perform:

"National Emblem March" by Bagley, "El Capitan March" by Sousa, "American Patrol" by Meschem, "Your Land and My Land" by Romberg, "The Holy City" by Adams, "Under the Double Eagle March" by Wagner, "American Heritage" by Whitcomb and "The Stars and Stripes Forever" by Sousa.

After the intermission, director Lloyd H. Knox will lead the band in:

"Americans We" by Fillmore, "America" by Henry Casey, "Beguine for Band" by Osser, "America the Beautiful" by Samuel Ward and "Battle Hymn of the Republic" by Howe and Steffe.

Nothing fishy about worm vending machine

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Fishermen who used to go out on warm, wet nights with flashlights and old soup cans to catch night crawlers now can buy their bait — if they have the exact change.

Night crawlers, meal worms and maggots are being sold in vending machines in Pennsylvania.

"Now store operators don't have to hand out ice cream cones with one hand and sort out worms with another," said Frank Kartesz, a high school math teacher who automated the bait business.

Kartesz spent two years developing a liquid that keep worms alive and healthy in the machines. He also developed a thermostat for the machines to maintain proper humidity.

Kartesz has 20 "Franko's Live Bait" machines operating in Somerset County and northwestern Pennsylvania, and he says sales have exceeded his expectations.

For $1, a fisherman gets a package of 15 night crawlers, 30 to 40 maggots or 70 meal worms.

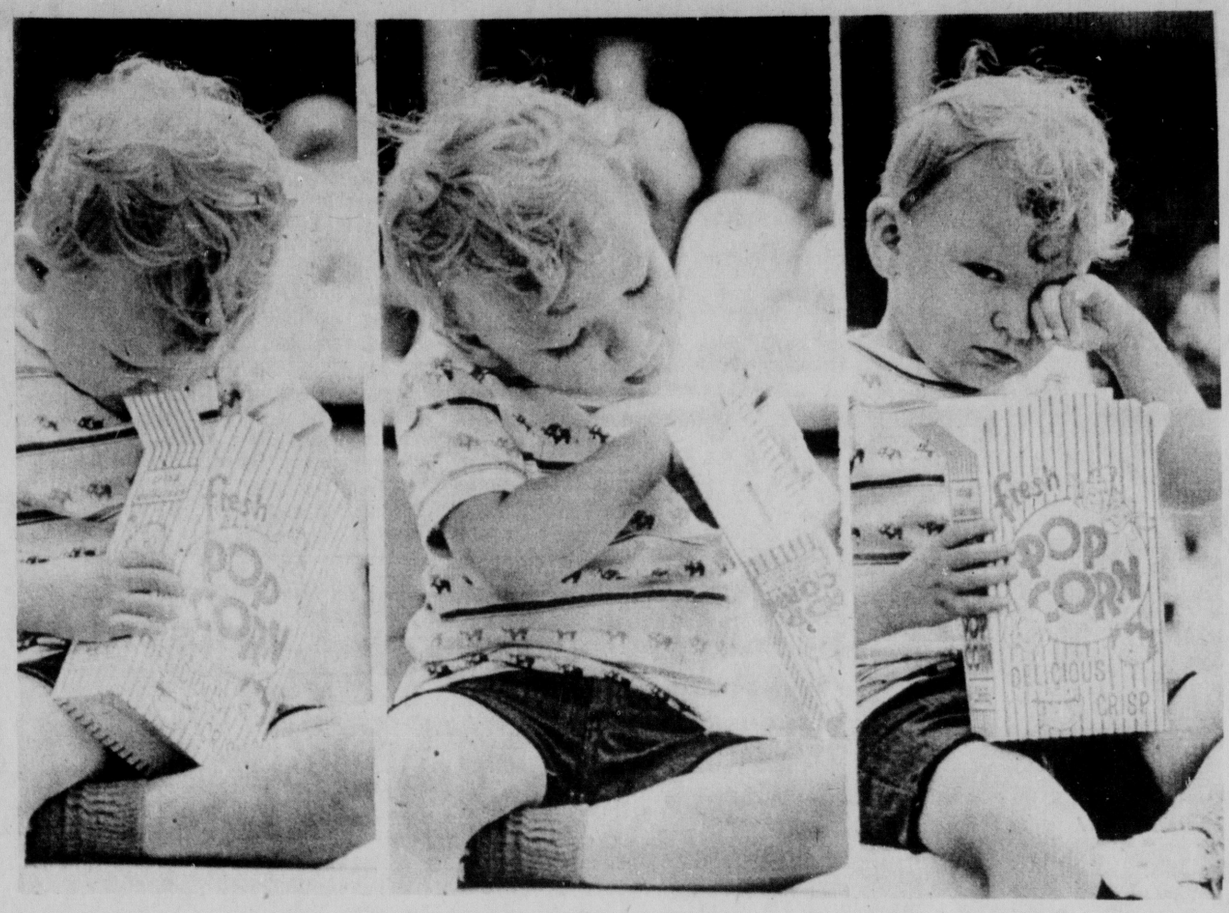

Business has been so good that Kartesz' basement worm farm has been unable to keep up with demand.

His worm pickers, including Amish families from nearby Meyersdale, scour wet ground for night crawlers. They get two cents for each one they catch.

"Some of them do very well," Kartesz said. "One fellow caught 12,000 worms in one night from sundown to sunup."

Kartesz says he has been "fooling around with bait" for about 20 years. His interest began as a youngster when he hunted worms on wet spring nights and stored his catch in tubs for the dry summer season when worms burrow deep into the ground in search of moisture.

Kartesz says several retail outlets have expressed interest in the vending machines, and he has bought a building where he plans to set up a production and packaging center.

Exercise room ready at community center

A new physical fitness exercise room is now available for the use of members of the Sedalia Community Center Athletic Club, community center director Andre Duchone announced Tuesday.

The new room is furnished with weightlifting equipment and other modern physical fitness equipment. Additional equipment has also been ordered and should arrive in the near future, Duchone said.

In addition to the new exercise room, the Athletic Club has a sauna bath, dressing rooms, lockers, showers and gymnasium, which are all part of the community center.

The Athletic Club, which has a $50 yearly membership fee, currently has 17 members.

Vitamin E won't help

Dear Dr. Lamb — Some friends of mine have started taking vitamin E to relieve the pain of arthritis. So far they are pleased with the relief that they are getting from it. I have read that taking this vitamin can be dangerous. Will you kindly comment on it? If it is all right for them to take it, how much should they take and how often?

Dear Reader — There is no evidence that vitamin E helps in any form of arthritis at all. Many people with chronic disorders, such as arthritis, think they are getting benefits when they start any new treatment. We call this the placebo effect. Sugar pills that the patient has faith in will do just as much.

The danger in taking vitamins as a cure for such disorders as arthritis is that it may delay or prevent a person from getting needed and useful medical help. To give you more information on the limitations of the use of vitamin E, I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-12, Vitamin E: Miracle or Myth. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I don't think reasonable amounts of vitamin E will hurt a person but it is a fat soluble vitamin, like D and A, and there have not been enough studies of its prolonged use in large amounts to really pin point what damage that might cause, other than to your pocket book.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have had two thyroid operations, the last in 1964 when I was 53. After the second operation I have had what is called a "throat spasm." One doctor called the spasm a nerve reaction, another an allergy. I can be sitting quietly and just swallow and get one. One doctor said to immediately drink hot water, and another said to drink cold water.

I have looked in several medical books and can't find throat spasm. Is it the same as spasm of the esophagus? I have about one attack a year, some severe, others moderate. I can't breathe and I have a strange noise in my throat which scares those around me as no one knows what to do for me. I keep drinking water until it stops. Often I have a severe headache following this, and the next day my chest is sore.

I have been told to relax when I get one, but it is very hard to relax when one is struggling to breathe. I am on thyroid. Is there anything you can recommend? Believe me any help to alleviate these spasms would be most welcomed and appreciated. Most doctors seem to dismiss it as unimportant.

Dear Reader — You can't locate it in books because it is called laryngospasm — spasm of your larynx. The muscles in the larynx contract vigorously, obstructing the air passage. The noise you hear is similar to the noise of "croup" and is caused by the movement of air through your narrowed airway. The soreness of your chest the next day is simple muscle soreness from the extra muscular effort you have had to make to breathe.

Laryngospasm is a symptom. It can be caused by several different things, including nervous tension. That is why you have gotten so many different answers.

It is going to be hard to track down the real cause for your laryngospasm because they occur so infrequently. I think you should see a specialist in ear, nose and throat problems — otorhinolaryngologist. He may be able to help you. The treatment will depend a lot on what he is able to find as an underlying cause of the attacks. (NEA)

There's no place on earth like Venus, says proud Nebraskan

Half the town

Art Von Seggern, half the population of Venus, Neb., holds court in his tiny store. "When people hear we're from Venus, they laugh and think we're oddballs," he says.

(AP)

By KILEY ARMSTRONG
Associated Press Writer

VENUS, Neb. (AP) — The neighboring towns of Mars and Star have fallen by the wayside, but the business of a bygone era lives on at Venus. Population 2.

Fresh farm milk and eggs, bolts and nails, livestock feed and a few pairs of size 5 children's shoes line the shelves of the Venus Store, which is kept in mint 1904 condition by owners Ella and Art Von Seggern.

"When people hear we're from Venus, they laugh and think we're oddballs," says Von Seggern. "But when I was in the hospital last year in Omaha, I was homesick. I thought, 'If I could just get back to Venus.'"

Venus, about 200 miles northwest of Omaha near the South Dakota border, was founded about 1879. It boasted a population of 11 in its heyday and had a creamery, blacksmith shop and dance hall.

Farmers still gather in winter around a pot-belly stove fueled with corncobs and wood. "He and I have changed the government a million times," Von Seggern said as he greeted a customer.

Outside, gas pumps of another era stand beside more modern ones, and a fading sign in the window reminds area residents of the Venus Post Office, closed in 1959.

Popularity keeps the store alive, one customer says.

If the Von Seggerns are busy, regular customers like Vincent Jackson, one of 500 people who live in nearby Orchard, help themselves to a loaf of bread or a dozen eggs then write their own charge slip.

"We've seen a lot of shopping centers come and go," says Von Seggern.

"But," adds his wife, "the people always forget to buy things and have to come to Venus."

Man sure flat theory to win out

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer

LANCASTER, Calif. (AP) — Only 10 miles from a place where scientists are perfecting a space shuttle to expand man's frontiers, Charles K. Johnson steadfastly teaches that the world is as flat as a pancake — and that the space program is a multibillion-dollar hoax.

"People treat us as if we're some sort of radicals — as if the flat-earth theory is a radical, eccentric idea and that there's some vast body of proof that the earth is round," says the 53-year-old Johnson, president of the International Flat Earth Research Society.

Nonetheless, he is confident his teachings will triumph and bring an abrupt end to the four-century reign of those who contend the earth is a spinning ball hurtling around the sun.

"Our beliefs are based on experience, not on mathematical scribblings," Johnson says as he leads the reporter through his home outside this desert community 70 miles north of Los Angeles. "We do not accept theory, which is imaginary."

Just over the cactus-strewn horizon from Johnson's little house lies sprawling Edwards Air Force Base, and the flight test center where the first space shuttle is undergoing tests for launching in two years.

The rugged, white-haired Johnson says he sees no need for space exploration. The proper view of the universe, he says, can be drawn from a reading of Genesis: "God created the heavens above and the earth below, and there should be no further doubt about the matter."

The earth itself, Johnson's society teaches, is flat and extends infinitely in all directions, although the known world is saucer-shaped because it is hemmed in by an impenetrable, 150-mile-high wall of ice that forms a South Pole around the rim of the saucer.

The sun, he says, is a 32-mile-high "spotlight" that moves in a circle 3,000 miles above the North Pole at the center of the known world. He conceded he isn't quite sure whether stars are stationary or mobile.

Johnson, who was born in San Angelo, Texas, the son of a cattle rancher, says he began doubting the world was round while he was in grammar school.

"The first time I saw a globe, it just didn't make any sense," he says. "But it was years before I could prove why."

To prove the earth is not round, Johnson says, the flat-earth society used surveyors' equipment to see if there was a curvature in the 61-mile Kiel Canal linking the Baltic and North seas. There was no curve, he says.

Besides, claims Johnson, who also rejects the theory of gravity as "absurd," if the world were round Australians would be hanging by their feet as they spin through space. And his wife, Marjory, an Australian, has never hung by her feet, he says.

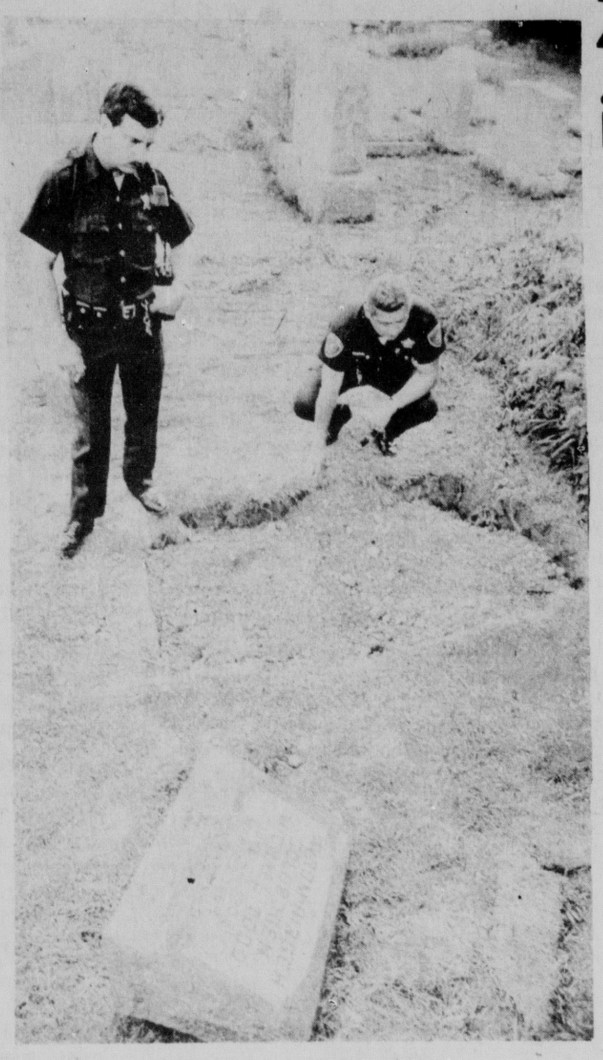

To Johnson, the 16th Century Copernician Revolution, which upset the traditional flat-earth theory of the universe, "is just a dusted off version of an ancient Greek myth." He calls round-earthers "illogical," "a mathematical cult" and "people who are willing to accept things on blind faith."

A ship that seems to be disappearing over the horizon is merely becoming smaller to a viewer as it moves into the distance, Johnson says, while the photographs purportedly sent back from space are fakes and no one has ever been to the moon. Johnson concedes rockets have been sent aloft, but he says their orbits amounted to no more than flying a level, circular pattern above the earth, not unlike a plane circling an airport.

Slide presentation on center prepared

An audio-visual presentation featuring 80 slides that depict various activities at the Sedalia Community Center has been prepared, it was announced Tuesday by Andre Duchone, director of the community center.

The presentation will be used by Duchone and other groups interested in explaining the function of the community center to outside groups.

Grave robbery

Two policemen in Forest Park, Ill., examine the defiled grave of movie producer Mike Todd after it was discovered earlier the week that Todd's coffin was empty. Officials said Wednesday, however, they are convinced that a bag containing remains found about 120 feet from the grave are Todd's. The robbery was believed to be an attempt to find an expensive ring inside the casket. Todd was killed in a 1958 plane crash and his body was burned beyond recognition. He was married to Elizabeth Taylor at the time of the crash. (UPI)

July 4th activities at Lincoln

LINCOLN — A carnival, dances, various games and a fireworks display will highlight activities at the Fourth of July celebration here Saturday through Monday.

Saturday activities will feature a square dance at 8 p.m. and round dance from 9 p.m. till midnight. Festivities on Sunday will include a 4-H and FFA livestock and horse show at 12:30 p.m., a slow pitch softball game at 2 p.m. between Lincoln and Cole Camp, a garden tractor pulling contest at 7 p.m. and a regular tractor and four-wheel drive pick-up pulling contest at 7:30 p.m.

On tap for Monday are many other activities including a youth horse show at 9 a.m., a barbecue from 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the shelter house, a horse show at 1 p.m., a pet parade at 1:30 p.m., a variety show and fiddler's contest at 7:45 p.m. and a fireworks display at dusk.

Other Monday events will be a frog and turtle race, sack race, bicycle race and wheelies, pork queen event, drawings and a flag ceremony.

Ruling may pose problem of coverage

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court decision Tuesday may create new legal risks for television stations and other news media when they film or record entertainment events for use on news programs.

The court ruled 5-4 that the news media have no constitutional protection against damage suits if the media broadcast a performer's entire act without his consent.

States, through their own laws, may authorize such suits without violating a First Amendment guarantee of a free press, the court said.

But states may also choose to pass laws protecting the news media from such suits, the majority continued.

The decison came in a case involving Hugo Zacchini, a self-described "human cannonball" who sued an Ohio televison station for broadcasting a film of his entire 15-second act at a county fair in Burton, Ohio, in 1972. In the act, Zacchini is shot from a cannon into a net about 200 feet away.

A reporter for WEWS-TV, a station owned by the Scripps-Howard Broadcasting Co., had filmed the act despite Zacchini's protest. The station then used the film in a news program.

Zoo displays brown rats in their natural setting

LONDON (AP) — Brown rats, the scourge of man for centuries, have gone on display in a European zoo — with a mock-up sewer for a home.

Per Seaton, an official of Copenhagen Zoo, says in the "International Zoo Yearbook" published by the Zoological Society of London that despite its vast numbers, the brown rat is not a common sight, living as it does underground beneath the cities. So the zoo had the idea of displaying the animal in its "natural" surroundings.

Seaton and his colleagues toured Copenhagen's sewers for ideas and then designed an exhibit to enable visitors to look directly into the rats' home, to see them behaving as they might had they remained hidden from human eyes.

The exhibit had to be escape-proof, so the staff made a 22-foot, imitation sewer tunnel from iron sheeting, in the shape of a big "C", with a breeding chamber at one end and a feeding chamber at the other — "an incentive for the rats to run up and down the tunnel with greater frequency," Seaton said.

Water, circulated by an electric pump, covers the sewer floor and, as extra touches of realism, the interior surface is cement-coated. Bits of broken pipe, rubble and old clothing are scattered on the floor. The exhibit is located in a gloomy storage cellar under dim lighting, which "does create a distinctly dramatic effect... and the total impression that it generates is one of calculated unpleasantness," Seaton said.

Above the breeding and feeding sections are dome-shaped acrylic skylights, inviting onlookers to put their heads in to survey the sewer from the interior. The skylights are at different heights so that small children can use them.

Seaton said the staff thought that their first rats — obtained from Denmark's State Pest Laboratories — would take about eight days to get accustomed to their new environment and come out of hiding.

"Rats are a highly suspicious species and in fact it took a full two months before they had completely acclimatized and had begun to behave in a natural manner," he said.

The rats are thriving. The original three multiplied in 18 months to 40 "very active rats and those born in the sewer are particularly well adapted to their surroundings," Seaton said.

Only one U.S. African policy is viable

WASHINGTON — Once again the headlines out of South Africa tell of massive black protests, police killing youths, of tear gas and other chemical agents filling the hate-charged air.

Rowan

We are left without doubt that far greater violence — a massive racial tragedy — is somewhere down the road.

And we are being told that by siding with South Africa's non-white majority and supporting the principle of majority rule, the Carter administration is somehow guilty of hastening catastrophe in South Africa.

Some critics argue that Mr. Carter should show "moderation" in dealing with South Africa, whatever that means, so as to avert "a long, bloody struggle that can only wound the West."

"Moderation" is a word of long usage in America's racial struggles. It was the pet word of whites who felt too enlightened to publicly support Jim Crow, but who lacked the guts to state forthrightly that segregation was wrong and ought to be ended immediately.

It's time we had some plain talk about American attitudes toward southern Africa and the relentless drift toward race warfare there.

1. There is a large group of white Americans whose hearts and minds are with the white minorities in South Africa, Rhodesia, South West Africa. These Americans believe, though few dare say it publicly, that whites are superior in every way — that whites in southern Africa are the bearers and protectors of white Christian civilization and should not be subjected to rule by "heathen blacks."

2. Another large group of whites, many of them in the State Department, the Pentagon and U.S. big business, know that South Africa is a vicious police state which practices racism in its ugliest forms. But they say U.S. policy ought to be based "not on sentimentality" but a hard pragmatic concern for U.S. security. They say that South African whites have enough gases, guns, bombers and troops to prevail, and that the Afrikaaners won't hesitate to kill 100 or 100,000 blacks if that is needed to maintain white rule. "Go with the likely winner," these "pragmatic" Americans say, adding that "we may need white South African help" in curbing Soviet power in the seas around the Cape of Good Hope.

3. A smaller group of white Americans (many in the Carter administration) and most black Americans reject both the purely racist attitudes of Group 1 and the cynical "pragmatism" of Group 2. They argue that a United States committed to human rights and international morality could never support South African apartheid or perpetual minority rule by the Afrikaaners."

We are going to discover, sooner than we think, that the "moral" posture of Group 3 is also the pragmatic position that will best protect U.S. security, economic and other interests in Africa in the long run.

The more blacks South African police kill, the more the black uprising will be taken out of the black into the glittering all-white communities of Johannesburg, Cape Town, Durban. A few years from now the Mau Mau terror in pre-independent Kenya may seem like a Sunday soccer outing compared with the violence in South Africa.

No white family will be able to trust a black servant. No white police official will be sure that his colored cops are on his side. Many businesses will flee South Africa, and those that remain will be sabotaged.

And who plants the seeds of tragedy? Not the Carter administration, as South African Foreign Minister R. F. (Pik) Botha seems to have convinced Evans and Novak is the case.

The seeds of tragedy lie in Botha's and other Afrikaaners' insistence that South Africa's 4.3 million whites will never share power with 22 million non-whites. Botha says he is prepared to die for continued white political control.

The pitiful prospect is that he will one day get the chance.

In Russia, 'rights' up to state

By B.J. CUTLER

The Soviet Union's next constitution, which has been published in draft form and will be adopted this fall after controlled "debate," is a strangely old-fashioned, even reactionary, document.

This is ironic for a society which claims to be "progressive," "advanced" and "scientific."

Its new constitution is in fact more backward than the one written by colonial farmers, merchants and lawyers in Philadelphia 190 years earlier.

The most striking difference between the two charters is their views of the individual. The 18th-century Americans saw man as having natural rights that government could not abridge. In modern Russia rights are granted by an all-powerful state which decides how — or if — they will be exercised.

A case in point is the 1936 "Stalin Constitution," which is being replaced. It contained liberal promises of freedom of press, speech, assembly, religion and privacy.

In practice, however, it gave no protection to millions of innocent persons who were jailed or executed in the dictator's blood purges.

In recent years small numbers of dissidents have pointed to that constitution in calling for human rights denied to them. They tried to defend themselves against criminal charges by insisting they were only asking for what was guaranteed to them by law.

General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, who expects the new document to make his mark in history, has moved to tighten the line against dissent.

After enumerating the people's rights, his constitution in effect takes them away by adding:

"Exercise by citizens of rights and freedoms must not injure the interest of society and the state..." In translation this clearly means the people can do just what Big Brother says and no more.

Brezhnev's constitution also strengthens the dominant role of the Communist Party in Soviet life. The party, it states, is "the ruling and directing power...of all the state and public organizations."

Of course, this has been the state of affairs since the 1917 revolution, but previous constitutions were not so frank about a ruling class in what was supposed to be Marx's classless society.

Minority rule, it turns out, is a problem not only in southern Africa.

What is also notable is the constitution's absence of checks and balances. Decisions are handed down by the Supreme Soviet, the nominal parliament run by the party, which also passes any party-desired enabling laws. There is no judicial review or possibility of appeal.

Moscow's propaganda machine would not agree, of course, but a comparison of the new constitution with America's "bourgeois" document of 1787 would be unfavorable to the former.

By including strong checks and balances the American framers protected the individual from arbitrary government.

By negating its paper promises of rights, the Brezhnev charter protects a ruling elite against its subjects.

Some progress.

Jimmy surprised

"There has been a surprising adverse reaction in the Soviet Union to our stand on human rights," said President Jimmy Carter the other day in describing what must be one of the most unsurprising surprises we've ever heard.

Did the President perhaps expect Leonid Brezhnev to be happy with some of Carter's earlier statements about the way Russia treats its dissidents? We say "earlier" because there has been a dramatic drop in the frequency of such statements in recent weeks.

Maybe Jimmy was just playing dumb, sly Southern fox that he is. Then there was that great line that he'd never had anything but good to say about Chairman Brezhnev.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance also spoke along these lines the other day by solemnly announcing that there were still—believe it or not—"serious differences" between the U.S. and the Russians in various areas. We would certainly hope so.

Has someone in Washington forgotten that we are dealing with a country whose very survival is dependent upon imprisoning the minds and spirits—and often the bodies—of its citizens?

Maybe we are in danger of believing our own detente propaganda.

Legislative abuse

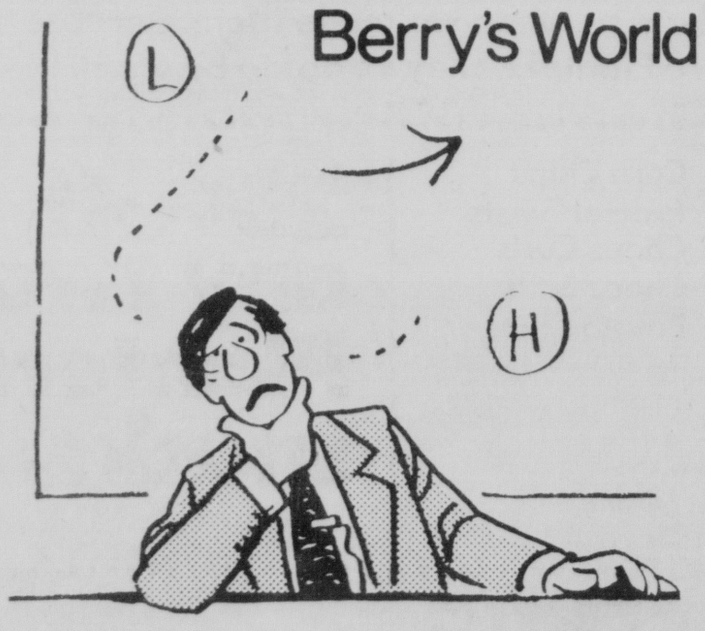

The prosecuting attorney has dropped felony drug charges against two former Warrensburg men. They had been charged here nearly two years ago with possession of LSD and methaqualone.

Among the reasons cited for the dismissal of charges was the fact that the trial had been repeatedly delayed by one defense attorney who also happens to be a state senator. Such "legislative continuances" have always struck us as a serious abuse of the judicial system.

It works this way. The accused hires himself a state representative or senator to defend him, and then his counsel delays the case to death, ostensibly because he is too busy in Jefferson City carrying out his official duties in the legislature. Several of our state legislators do a lucrative business in this manner. The prosecuting attorney remarked the other day that he had heard of one state lawmaker who obtained 30-some continuances for his client. Since delay is the name of the game to a large extent in criminal defense, many charges end up being dismissed, as in the case here.

The loser usually ends up being society.

U.S. oil supplies terrorists' targets

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The story can now be told how terrorists tried to hijack a multimillion-dollar offshore oil platform and hold it for a huge ransom. Other terrorists staged a hit-and-run grenade attack on a Pennsylvania refinery. Still others conducted a blow-torch assault upon pipe valves in California.

These dramatic incidents, withheld from the public by fearful federal authorities, have been revealed to the Senate Judiciary Committee in secret testimony. Dr. Maynard Stephens, a veteran pipeline safety expert, described the sabotage attempts as stark evidence that terrorists could disrupt the nation's fuel supply all too easily.

So disturbed is the committee over the menace that the testimony was distributed to senators for their eyes only. We have obtained a copy, nevertheless, of the secret transcript. We have decided to withhold the how-to-do-it details for security reasons. But the public is entitled to know, as Dr. Stephens gravely testified, that "no thought" has been given to protect our vital oil facilities "against invasion or planned destruction."

He learned in New Orleans about the attempt to seize the offshore platform, "demanding payment of large sums of money. This has been done and kept out of the papers ..." he said. "It's been kept very quiet but it has been done, to actually take the offshore platform as a hostage."

A $50 million platform installation, he pointed out, "makes a very great hostage." Yet only a single Navy ship patrols the oil facilities, which are probing under the sea for precious petroleum.

The reaction to a sabotage attempt, he said, is to hush it up. "We try to avoid TV coverage. We try to avoid newspaper coverage..." he said. "We hate to admit that we have enemies, you see."

Yet the lack of publicity, unfortunately, has created a lackadaisical attitude toward adequate security. A concentrated attack on oil refineries by a few well-trained men, Stephens warned, "would put us entirely out of business." Assaults on pipelines at bridges, underwater river crossings and pumping stations could wipe out the nation's oil and gas supplies for months, he pleaded.

Fast-moving motorboats could easily set fire to a series of offshore wells. Perhaps 10 or 15 people, coordinating their efforts, could send the United States into an economic tailspin overnight, he said.

Stephens warned that the Alaska pipeline, now pumping oil out of the Arctic, was "highly vulnerable." Even a "stray bullet from a hunter's gun could cause damage and serious problems," he said.

In a matter of hours, he claimed, two or three saboteurs could also "shut off 80 per cent of the natural gas going to the Eastern United States." All they have to do, he said, is stage an attack in the right place — which, of course, we don't intend to identify.

Incredibly, the petroleum lines serving one-third of the East Coast are controlled by computers in a single building. "It's bad security," said Stephens. "It's putting all your eggs in one basket." If the computer should be blown up, he reported, the fuel supply would have to be shut down until it was repaired.

"An oil and gas pipeline system is like a watch," he explained. "A small part might be destroyed and it stops the entire movement." Yet what little security planning the oil industry is doing, he said, is "with friends and over cocktails."

The government isn't doing much better. "Each agency, military and civilian alike, expects some other agency to (do the) contingency planning," Stephens said.

Yet the assaults that have already taken place should be warning enough that tighter security is urgently needed to protect the national fuel supply.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST — American officials are surprised at the restraint the North Vietnamese have used in handling the $5 billion worth of U.S. military equipment that was left behind when Saigon fell. Some of the material, particularly aircraft, is being used. But most of it has been cleaned and stored. The Vietnamese, despite several offers, have refused to sell it and, in the words of U.S. analysts, have displayed remarkable "sensitivity" for our feelings.

— Foreign diplomats in Saigon, now Ho Chi Minh City, report that the city is still far different from Hanoi. Many bars are still open, and life remains relatively loose. Former American housing has been looted, and many North Vietnamese army officers have been spotted heading north with air conditioners and television sets. U.S. analysts jokingly predict that the South Vietnamese life-style may eventually pollute the spartan society of the north.

— Communist Cambodia now claims to be raising enough rice for export. But American analysts suspect this is possibly only because the rigid regime is severely rationing rice to its own people. The current measure, despite the official campaign to purge everything Western, is half of a Nestle's condensed milk can of rice per day for each person.

— The North Koreans in their propaganda and literature invariably preface any reference to their leader Kim Il-sung with the phrase, "Respected and Beloved." This practice is so prevalent that Americans analysts refer to Kim as "old R and B."

Lawmakers vote on food stamps, Korea pullout, abortion funding

By Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes June 16-22:

HOUSE

FOOD STAMPS — Rejected, 154 for and 262 against, an attempt to cut about $674 million from the fiscal 1978 food stamp budget, a reduction of about 9 per cent. The amendment was proposed to HR 7558, a Department of Agriculture appropriations bill later passed and sent to the Senate. Members voting yes wanted to spend less on food stamps.

Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif., the sponsor, said: "It is time to get those individuals above the poverty line off the food stamp program. By enacting my amendment we will say to the program's administrators, 'Do a better job — cut out the waste and direct the program to the truly poor and the truly needy, including the elderly.'"

Rep. Baltasar Corrada, D-Puerto Rico, an opponent, called the amendment "an attempt to foster a fiscally responsible image at the expense of many who have no real political power to oppose this attempt and live under the constant threat of merely coping for survival in what many of us consider an increasingly affluent society."

Rep. Richard Ichord voted yes; Rep. Ike Skelton voted no.

SUGAR SUBSIDY — Rejected, 119 for and 272 against, an amendment to kill a proposed federal subsidy of the U.S. sugar industry. Members voting against were in favor of the $240 million subsidy for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1. The cash subsidy of growers is a new program to enable the domestic industry to compete better against foreign sugar. The amendment was proposed to HR 7558, the fiscal 1978 Department of Agriculture appropriations bill, later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., sponsor of the amendment, said: "Three years ago...the price of sugar soared. Sugar growers cashed in on the high prices and expanded their production. But the rise in production has resulted in a superabundance of sugar on the world market...and sugar growers found themselves in trouble as the world became inundated with sugar."

Rep. Gillis Long, D-La., an opponent, said: "It would be a misrepresentation to suggest that sugar farmers have brought their current plight upon themselves by overplanting in order to take advantage of world prices that peaked in 1974. The current depressed price for sugar, indeed, results from a number of factors, but overplanting by cane and beet farmers is not one of them."

Ichord voted yes; Skelton voted no.

ABORTION — Adopted, 201 for and 155 against, an amendment imposing a total ban on the use of federal funds to finance abortions. The amendment eliminated the one remaining instance in which federal funds could be used — cases where the mother's life is endangered by the birth. About 300,000 abortions are being performed annually on poor mothers under Medicaid.

The amendment was attached to HR 7555, the fiscal 1978 appropriations bill for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, later passed and sent to the Senate. Members voting for the amendment favored the total ban.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., the sponsor, said: "We can tell the ghetto mother that she is going to have to fight for everything which the middle class woman has, such as education, housing, clothing and food, but then we can say: 'We will give you one thing. We will give it to you and we will pay for it. We will let you kill your young.'"

Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., an opponent, said: "Do we really think we stop abortions by anything like this (amendment)? No, we do not. We send people to motels and abortion mills. We all know it. The doctors can tell us. The victims turn up in the hospitals of various states, sometimes dying from infection or hemorrhage."

Skelton voted yes; Ichord did not vote.

SENATE

SOUTH KOREA — Adopted, 79 for and 15 against, an amendment which supported the gradual reduction of U.S. ground forces in South Korea but stopped short of endorsing President Carter's planned withdrawal of all ground troops. Although highly qualified, the non-binding language was interpreted as favorable to Carter's South Korean policy. It was attached to a foreign aid bill (HR 6689) later passed and sent to conference with the House. Senators voting no were opposed to Carter's proposed phaseout of ground troops in South Korea.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., sponsor of the amendment, said: "I believe that President Carter's concept of a gradual reduction is consistent with our own national interest and that of the South Koreans."

"Have we learned nothing at all from history?" asked Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. "Will South Korea, as a result of our conscious decision, go the way of South Vietnam and Cambodia? If it does, we shall bear a heavy responsibility in the eyes of history."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton voted yes and Sen. John Danforth voted no.

MINE SAFETY — Rejected, 25 for and 58 against, an amendment to retain the Interior Department as the department responsible for mine safety. It was proposed to S 717, later passed and sent to the House. S 717 will become the major mine safety law, absorbing and changing laws enacted in 1966 and 1969. It proposes transferring mine safety jurisdiction from the Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration (MESA) of the Interior Department to an agency with the Department of Labor. It was this plan that the amendment sought to prevent.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., sponsor of the amendment, said: "I am convinced the Department of the Interior has done as effective and conscientious job of promoting mine safety and improving conditions for miners as was possible under existing law. If there is fault...it is the fault of Congress."

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., an opponent, said: "The difficulty with MESA is that it has failed at every turn. It has failed in terms of reducing the danger...in terms of the training required of miners in order to maintain a reduction in danger...in terms of issuing adequate and timely mandatory standards."

Danforth voted yes and Eagleton voted no.

WATERWAY FEES — Rejected, 44 for and 51 against, an amendment to delay the imposition of federal tolls on commercial barges that ply inland waterways maintained and/or built by the federal government. Those senators voting no favored imposing the fees. The amendment was proposed to S 1529, later passed and sent to the House.

At issue is the fact that inland shippers historically have benefited from billions in federal improvements on waterways, but have not had to pay for the work. Railroads and other competitors call this unfair. S 1529 requires that, by 1990, fees will be levied to cover 100 per cent of maintenance and operation costs and 50 per cent of capital improvement costs. The rejected amendment called for further study of the matter before legislating such fees.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., a supporter of the amendment, said railroads have received billions of dollars in government benefits not available to the commercial barge industry, and that the purpose of the proposed waterways fee "is to help the railroads make more money at the expense of their competitors."

Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, an opponent, said he supports the fees because "if we have improvements made with federal tax dollars and we can identify the beneficiaries we ought to be smart enough to say that the chief beneficiaries should pay for part of the improvements."

Danforth and Eagleton voted yes.

Angels continue to desert Tanana

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — After 72 games this season, Kansas City manager Whitey Herzog still can't detect a trend in the American League's West Division.

"I've seen it all this year," Herzog said Tuesday night after pitcher Dennis Leonard pitched a two-hitter and his Royals rallied for a 3-1 triumph over the California Angels.

"If you finish ahead of California, you are going to win it," said Herzog. "Whether it is us or someone else, I don't know.

"I don't think the Angels have put everything together yet. Minnesota and Chicago don't have a Nolan Ryan and Frank Tanana. Ken Brett is a good pitcher and the Angels have a good bullpen in Dave LaRoche and Paul Hartzell."

But what the Angels don't have these days is a healthy team.

The regular shortstop, third baseman, leftfielder and centerfielder were missing Tuesday night with injuries. And so, it seems, is the California offense whenever Tanana works.

A sixth-inning home run by Rusty Torres, a .136 hitter, was the Angels' run Tuesday night. It was the only run his teammates have given Tanana in 28 innings.

For seven innings, it looked like Torres' first home run of the season would be enough to make Tanana the major league's first 12-game winner.

A single by John Mayberry leading off the eighth inning turned the game around. Dave Nelson pinch-ran for the first baseman and scored on a triple by Amos Otis to tie the game at 1-1.

Buck Martinez doubled to score Otis with the go-ahead run. The Royals added insurance in the ninth inning, when Hal McRae hit his ninth home run of the season.

The victory improved Leonard's record to 6-8. Tanana, 11-5, had a two-hit shutout going to the eighth inning.

Leonard struck out six and didn't walk a batter. Tanana struck out seven and walked one.

Matter of opinion

Pittsburgh pitcher Terry Forster, left, registers his opinion of a balk call by umpire Art Williams in the second inning of Tuesday night's first game with the Cardinals. The balk was called when Forster tried to pick off the Cords' Keith Hernandez. Intervening in the dispute is first baseman Willie Stargell. (UPI)

Reitz has liking for new baseball

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The rabbit ball is alive and well in St. Louis.

"When you hit it," says Ken Reitz, "you know it's going to go someplace. The ball, I think, is a lot better this year than it has been."

Discussed by batters and cussed by pitchers, the ball being used this season has been jumping out of major league stadiums at an alarming rate.

Reitz improved on this year's burgeoning quota with two home runs and eight RBI Tuesday night, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 13-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates and a sweep of a doubleheader. The Cardinals won the first game, 6-1.

Reitz' first homer of the night and ninth of the season came with the bases loaded in the fourth inning off Grant Jackson. His second homer, a three-run belt in the eighth, was hit off Mario Mendoza, a reserve infielder who pitched in his first major league game.

Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner brought in Mendoza after Jackson was hammered for 10 runs and 10 hits in the first six innings. Tanner said the Pirates' second doubleheader in three days had depleted the pitching staff, prompting his decision to pitch Mendoza.

In other National League games, the Chicago Cubs beat the Montreal Expos 4-2 in 10 innings; the Houston Astros turned back the San Diego Padres 5-1; the Philadelphia Phillies whipped the New York Mets 3-1; the Cincinnati Reds stopped the San Francisco Giants 11-4 and the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the Atlanta Braves 3-2.

Buddy Shultz gave up five hits through 7 1/3 innings in his first major league start as St. Louis took the first game from Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh scored with none out in the first inning of the opener, then the Cards earned a 1-1 tie the next inning on singles by Keith Hernandez and Tyson, then moved in front to stay when four singles and a hit batsman produced two runs in the fourth.

Cubs 4, Expos 2

Pinch-hitters Gene Wreg Gross drove in runs with sacrifice flies in the 10th to lead Chicago over Montreal. The Cubs loaded the bases against loser Will McEnaney on singles by Steve Ontiveros and Mick Kelleher and a fielder's choice by Steve Swisher.

Astros 5, Padres 1

Enos Cabell hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning and Bob Watson drove in two more runs to support Joaquin Andujar's five-hitter as Houston defeated San Diego.

Andujar, who had never beaten San Diego in four decisions, won for the seventh time in eight starts and improved his record to 9-4.

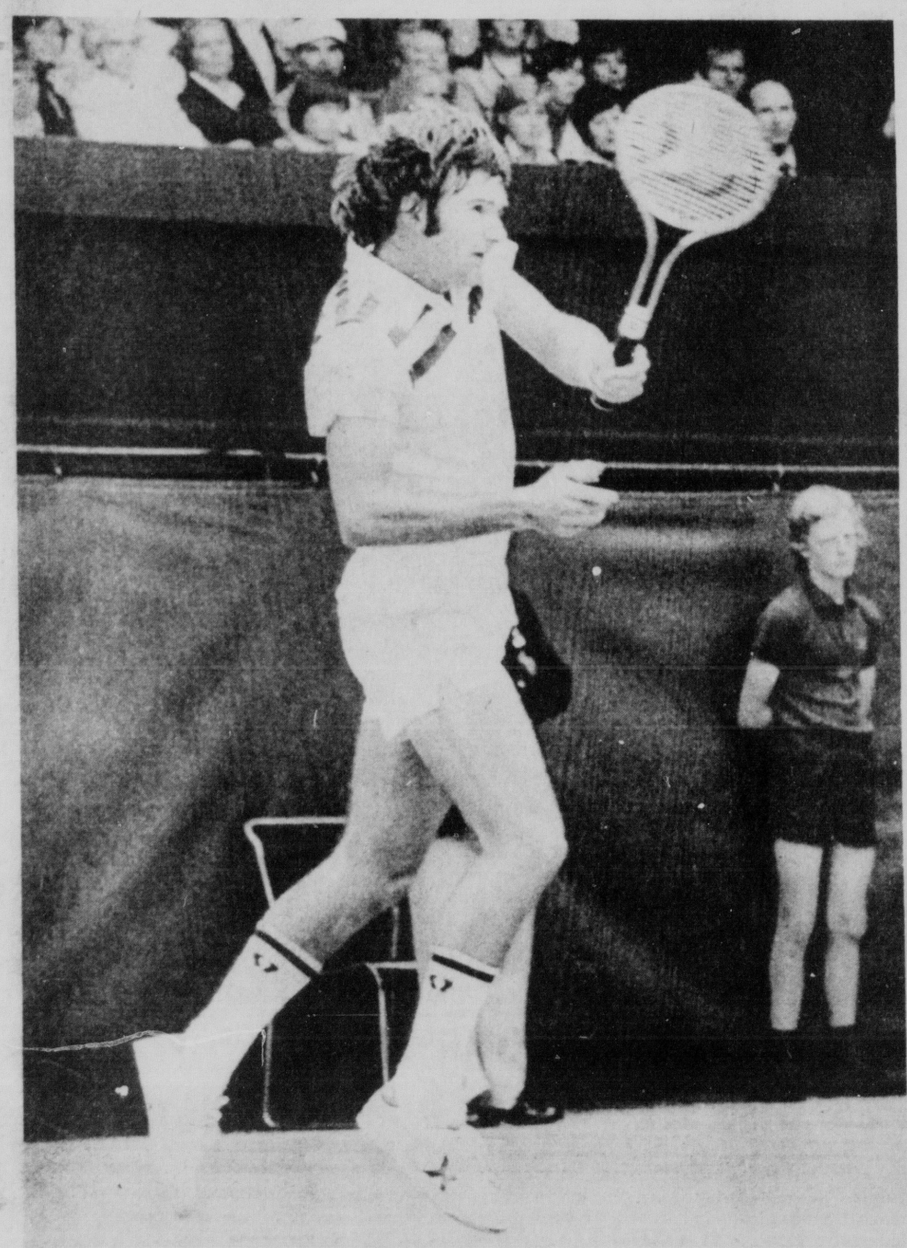

Phillies 3, Mets 1

Grag Luzinski and Bake McBride slammed home runs to power Philadelphia over New York in a rain-delayed game. Luzinski's 16th homer of the season in the eighth inning cleared the right-center field fence to snap a 1-1 tie.

Dodgers 3, Braves 2

A pinch-hit home run by Ed Goodson broke a tie in the ninth inning and gave Los Angeles its victory over Atlanta. Goodson connected against reliever Max Leon leading off the ninth, sending a shot over the short fence in right at Atlanta Stadium.

The Dodgers had tied the score in the eighth after trailing from the second inning on, with two errors by Atlanta third baseman Jerry Royster contributing to the tying run.

McEnroe keeping cool

Bulletin

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Britain's Virginia Wade upset defending champion Chris Evert 6-2, 4-6, 6-1 in the semifinals of the women's singles of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships today.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "I'm not shy," says John McEnroe, 18-year-old tennis sensation from Douglaston, N.Y., in the understatement of Wimbledon's centenary tournament.

McEnroe, son of a lawyer, came here primarily to play in Wimbledon's junior tournament. He's scratched himself from that. He's got far more important things to do, like playing Jimmy Connors in the men's singles semifinal.

McEnroe reached the last four — the youngest in Wimbledon's history to do so — by knocking out Phil Dent, the Australian seeded 13th, 6-4, 8-9, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 in the quarter-finals Tuesday. In the previous round he effectively disposed of the very experienced Sandy Mayer of Mendham, N.J.

In the semifinals Thursday, he's due to meet Connors, the No. 1 seed and hot favorite. He's taking the prospect coolly. "I don't know I've even met him," he said.

McEnroe's passage to the last four hasn't been a quiet one. He's already drawn one rebuke for his language. And he threw a temper tantrum once or twice in his match against Dent when calls went against him.

"I'm very intense," he explained afterward, "but I've controlled myself here. Wimbledon is a great tournament, but I'm not letting it intimidate me. That way, you lose matches."

The prospect of playing Connors doesn't seem to bother him. But what to do with the prize money does. Even if the loses his semifinal, he'll have netted himself $6,800.

As an amateur, he won't be eligible for any prize money. "I don't know what happens," he said. "I think they give it to me and I have to give it up to someone else. We'll find out about that later."

McEnroe's victory over Dent was one of two shocks in the men's quarter-finals Tuesday. The other was the almost clinical elimination of Ilie Nastase from the singles by Bjorn Borg, the champion who beat Nastase in the final last year.

Borg's score Tuesday was 6-0, 8-6, 6-3 and he ran the wily but temperamental Romanian right off court with some of the best pinpoint passing shots seen on the center court this year.

During the match Nastase collected a couple more warnings to add to the one he'd already been given in an earlier round. They were for time-wasting and using bad language, and after the match the Romanian stormed out of the courts and said he was flying straight back to Los Angeles.

With Connors having beaten Byron Bertram, the South African, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 and Vitas Gerulaitis of Howard Beach, N.Y., beating Billy Martin of Palos Verdes, Calif., 6-2, 8-9, 6-2, 6-2, the semifinals Thursday will be Connors vs. McEnroe and Gerulaitis vs. Borg.

Today's women's semifinals find Britain's Virginia Wade meeting Chris Evert and Sue Barker, also of Britain, playing Betty Stove of the Netherlands.

Chicago batters batter Seattle to tune of 10-4

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Larry Doby knows why the Chicago White Sox are one of the top hitting teams in the major leagues. He should — he's their batting coach.

"Our hitters are all aggressive," said Doby after the White Sox demolished Seattle pitching for their second straight 10-4 triumph over the expansion team. "But they are also patient and they wait for the good pitch. They worked all spring and it's paying off."

It's paying off to the tune of a .284 team batting average, 382 runs scored and 87 home runs in 71 games. Last season, Chicago hit .255 with 586 runs scored and only 73 home runs.

The hottest Chicago batter is Lamar Johnson, whose 10-game hitting streak includes six homers in the last 10 days — the latest being a two-run smash Tuesday night.

Richie Zisk smashed his 17th home run in the victory over Seattle, but it was his first round-tripper in two weeks.

The White Sox have scored 58 runs in their last seven games but still are one game behind Minnesota in the American League West.

In other American League games, Minnesota upended Milwaukee 8-3; Boston dropped its fifth straight, a 3-2 decision to Detroit; New York won the nightcap of a twi-night double-header 5-1 in 11 innings after Toronto captured the opener 8-5; Kansas City's Dennis Leonard hurled a two-hitter to beat California 3-1, and Oakland nipped Texas 6-5.

Twins 8, Brewers 3

Paul Thormodsgard, 5-4, pitched his second complete game of the season and earned his first victory at home as the Twins remained atop the AL West. Glenn Adams and Dan Ford drove in two runs apiece in support of the rookie.

Tigers 3, Red Sox 2

Ron LeFlore's two-out single in the bottom of the ninth gave Detroit its victory. Boston relief ace Bill Campbell, 5-5, was the victim of LeFlore's hit as the Tigers won their third straight game, equalling the team's longest success streak of the season.

Yankees 5-5, Blue Jays 8-1

The Yankees moved to within 1½ games of the Red Sox in the AL East despite the split. New York scored four runs in the 11th inning of the nightcap, when Mickey Rivers hit a tie-breaking infield single and Graig Nettles added a long double to right.

Toronto won the opener thanks to some sloppy outfielding by the Yankees in the seventh inning. Mickey Rivers and Reggie Jackson misplayed fly balls, Chris Chambliss mishandled a grounder and Thurman Munson allowed a runner to escape a rundown with a bad throw.

A's 6, Rangers 5

The A's ruined Billy Hunter's debut as Texas manager with a two-run, ninth-inning burst. Manny Sanguillen led off with a single, moved to second on a balk by Rangers' reliever Adrian Devine, 5-5. Wayne Gross singled Sanguillen home with the tying run and, after a sacrifice, Willie Crawford lined a single to right.

Glenn scores hole-in-one

Jimmy Glenn, 2415 1st Street Terr., scored a hole-in-one Tuesday afternoon at the Sedalia Country Club.

Glenn scored his ace using a 5-iron on the 125-yard 7th hole, known as "Little Dinky."

It was his first hole-in-one ever and was witnessed by Bill Labus and John Butler.

Cauthen gets good start

NEW YORK (AP) — Teenager Steve Cauthen, having lost the five-pound weight allowance given apprentice jockeys, obviously isn't affected by having to carry the extra weight.

Cauthen celebrated his first day as a full-fledged jockey Tuesday by riding winners in his first three races at Belmont Park.

The 17-year-old sensation raised his number of winners for the year to 287, tops in the nation. He booted home Crab Grass, $5.80, in the second race, Double Gemini, $5.40, in the third, and Smokey Lantern, $13, in the fourth.

All three horses came from off the pace, and after each victory, the crowds around the winner's circle mounted and the 14,477 fans applauded him loudly.

Cauthen's success did not surprise him. "I was an official jockey the first time I got on a horse," he said.

As an apprentice, Cauthen had 524 winners.

Cauthen returned to action last week after a month's layoff due to injuries.

"A lot of people were wondering how I would do without the 'bug (the five-pound weight allowance he enjoyed as an apprentice)," Cauthen said.

He didn't keep them wondering for long.

Bill Berry League managers' meeting

There will be a meeting of Bill Berry League managers at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Centennial Park field.

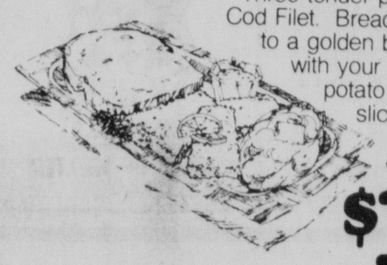

All managers must be present. The meeting is to decide the format for the second round of the season.

Wimbledon fickle toward villains

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The two villains of tennis, Ilie Nastase and Jimmy Connors. Wimbledon loves the one and has a deep-seated dislike for the other.

It is one of sport's strange paradoxes.

When Nastase, the mad Romanian, arrives at this hallowed shrine of the lawn game, five rackets cradled in one arm and his pretty wife, Dominique, clinging to the other, drooling women almost scratch each other's eyes out fighting to reach his line of passage.

Teen-agers scream and giggle. Middle-aged women gush. Even old gray-haired ladies in bonnets nudge forward to bestow a smile.

Therea's a marked contrast when the cocky young Connors, acknowledged to be the best player in the world, is driven to the main entrance of the jaded green club house in a chauffered limousine, mother Gloria hovering over him like a doting hen.

Animosity sizzles.

The contrasting mood has been carried over to the courts during the opening six days of the championships.

Nastase, whose antics previously had nettled the brass, was assigned last week to court No. 14, about as far from the club house as one could get. Wildly screaming teen-agers ripped off a huge section of canvas and caused a temporary stand to collapse.

Serious injury fortunately was avoided.

On Monday, Nastase was pitted in the center court against Bjorn Borg, a handsome young Swede of perfect docorum and great tennis skill. Borg, 21, once was the idol of the so-called teenyboppers, youthful hero worshippers.

No more. Now Nastase, the man who horrified Forest Hills with his behavior a year ago, is the court idol.

Against Borg, Ilie protested two calls and challenged a photographer in the first three minutes, put on his old stalling tactics, fretted with the umpire and banged a ball straight at Borg, missing.

The stoical Borg never flinched, never registered a protest. The match ended with the crowd — 80 per cent at least — still cheering for the losing Romanian.

Later on an adjacent court, the crowd didn't attempt to mask its feelings in the match between Connors and an obscure South African, Byron Bertram. Every time Bertram hit a winner, there was a resounding cheer. Connors' finest efforts were greeted with polite applause.

Connors' brashness and arrogance offend the British fetish for propriety. A loner, pampered by first a grandmother and then a mother, he achieved his tennis success against tremendous odds and with little enouragement from the establishment.

Tradition means little to him. Tennis is a game he plays for a livelihood and he seems to take the attitude that he owes nothing to anyone.

Nastase is similar in many respects but there is a certain charm about his explosions. Like Connors, he can be obscene and thoughtless at times. But for some reason, the Wimbledon crowds forgive him.

They regard him as a puckish prankster. Connors is the ogre.

New England fishermen crazy with attack of Bluefish Fever

CHAPPAQUIDDICK ISLAND, Mass. (AP) — Summer brings a slow change to the New England seacoast. Sailboats slip one by one into the sea and an occasional sunbather stretches onto the sand.

Suddenly one day — no one knows when — the pace quickens. Word passes swiftly. "The bluefish are in!"

This goes to the veins of salt water fishermen. The bluefish, the savage in the sea who runs in mad schools like a dog in his pack, is once again oiling these chilled Northeast waters.

It's this time of summer when fishermen are struck with "Bluefish Fever." They leave their paint brushes to harden and their alwns untrimmed. In dune buggies and chest waders, the march to the sea. Day and night they fish, heaving graceful monofilament arcs from the tine of their 10-foot poles.

"Look for the gulls," says Bill Reynolds, a fisherman on Cape Code. "They follow the blues."

Bluefish are labeled marauders of the deep, killers and wolves in the sea. Their Latin name, Pomatomus saltatrix, means a sheathed, leaping, cutting edge. They're cannibals. Feeding at a frenzied pitch, they will chew blindly into one another.

Their schools are so great that when they feed you can smell fish in the air. They chase the smaller fish, often the young of their own species. These young, running two pounds or less, are called "snapper blues."

Large blues — they can go over 10 pounds — are tagged "slammers." The name comes from the way they hit a lure. "Like a car wreck," says Reynolds.

The blue, looking sleek like a large minnow and having oversized eyes that stare daggers, migrates to these waters each summer from below the Carolinas. In the fall, he returns south.

By then, Bluefish Fever has subsided. It's only in the creature's first, frantic days here that fishermen are so stricken.

"People go bananas when they arrive," says Larry Yacubian, a native of the southern Massachusetts seacoast town of Westport.

It hurts to catch a bluefish. They're relentless fighters and a fisherman's back and forearms wear sore. Lures are removed with pliers. One snap and the blue can steal a finger.

"I had to quit," says a fisherman from New Jersey. "My arms were killing me."

Bluefishermen have a jargon. When one says, "I got into the blues," the phrase is literal. If they're "running," an angler can be up to his knees in fish.

Three men from Nantucket Island once hauled 119 in one afternoon. Reynolds says he has caught 100 pounds worth in two hours. When the blue schools, he doesn't swim. It's more of a stampede.

The meat is soft. Stripped from the fish, it is a pink-tinged gray that turns white in baking.

The Nantucket Cookbook, which to some New Englanders is the Bible of seafood cooking, suggests spreading three pounds of the fish with salt, onion flakes and butter; broil until brown; pour three shots of gin onto the fish, and light with a match. Return the fish to the broiler. Four minutes later, after the flames sputter, the feast is ready.

Veterans sign

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots have announced the signing of veterans Randy Vataha and Bill Lenkaitis and three other players.

Vataha, signed as a free agent in 1971, has caught 178 passes for 3,055 yards and 144 points in 80 National Football League games as a wide receiver. Lenkaitis, a center, is a veteran of eight pro seasons, six with New England.

Safety Willie Germany and linebacker Pete Barnes, who were picked up on waivers during the 1976 season and helped the Patriots to the NFL playoffs for the first time, also signed contracts.

Surgery for hurler

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Brent Strom, a left-handed pitcher sent by the San Diego Padres to their Hawaii farm club in the Pacific Coast League last month, is scheduled to undergo surgery on his pitching arm.

Dr. Paul Bauer, the Padres' team physician, said he would operate on Strom Thursday to remove calcium deposits.

Strom began the 1977 season as a starter for the Padres, but in 11 innings, he allowed 15 runs and walked 10 while striking out five. He had a 0-1 record with an earned run average of 11.45 before being sent to Hawaii.

Last year, he led the Padres in strikeouts with 103 and was second to Randy Jones in victories.

Accord reached

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates have agreed to pay a full year's salary to first baseman Bob Robertson, whom they released during spring training.

The 30-year-old Robertson was given 30 days' pay when he was released March 31 after eight years in the major leagues.

He claimed he was entitled to a full-year's pay because he suffered a back injury in spring training. Pirates vice president Harding Peterson contended that the back injury was an old ailment.

Robertson filed a grievance with the Major League Players Association, claiming he was due full pay, reported at $50,000.

Robertson recently underwent surgery to correct a disc problem in his back.

Putting tourney

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Only the Western Regional playoff remained today before semifinal action begins in the $170,000 World Putting Championship.

Play was completed Tuesday in the Central and Southern regionals, with the two survivors in each advancing to the world quarter-finals which begin Thursday.

In the central regional, Gary Miller of Columbus, Ga., the 1975 world putting titlist, beat Tony Cross of Louisville, Ky., 2 and 1, and Gary Justice of Rockville, Md., beat Jim Borchelt of Cincinnati 1-up in a sudden-death playoff.

In the Southern Regional competition, delayed until Tuesday because of rain, Robert Smith of Dallas, defeated Gary Benfield of Charlotte, N.C., 2 and 1, and Eugene Carter of Johannesburg, South Africa, beat Rodney Phillips of Lubbock, Tex., 2 and 1.

Opening lead — 8 ♠

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The late Harry Merkle of San Francisco was one of the best players on the West Coast. His lead on today's hand was made many years ago, but it still stands as one of the great leads.

North and South were playing a form of the Fishbein convention in which they doubled preemptive bids for business and bid the cheapest minor for takeout. Thus, South's four-club bid was an all-suit takeout of East's three-spade opening.

Merkle bid four spades and North went to five clubs. This left Merkle on lead. It seemed reasonable that his partner would have a singleton in one of the red suits but there was no way for Harry to know which one.

However, he knew his partner would know so he opened the eight of spades. East won the trick and had no problem about what to lead back. He put his singleton diamond on the table.

South won in dummy and led a trump to Harry's ace. Back came a second diamond, and East ruffed for a one-trick set.

Ask the Jacobys

A Rhode Island reader wants to know if it is true that all the best players in the United States and Canada play the precision club system.

A resounding "no" is the answer. We doubt if any of the 30 best in North America play that system and very few among the 1,000 best.

Ann Landers

Ugly husband turns her off

Dear Ann Landers: Fifteen years ago I married a handsome, broad-shouldered, flat-bellied fellow with thick brown, wavy hair. Today he is pot-bellied, double-chinned, nearly bald and downright ugly.

I have managed to keep my looks and have been told I am even more attractive today than when I was twenty. I watch what I eat, take pains with my hair and makeup and do my best to present a neat appearance.

I've tried to put Fatso on a diet, to no avail. I encourage him to exercise which he refuses to do, nor will he consider a toupee. His appearance is embarrassing. I hate for people to know I am married to him.

He has wonderful qualities, is a good provider, a hard worker, a loving father and husband, but yucky to look at.

I have tried to concentrate on his good qualities and block out his looks but I can't. I feel degraded making love to such a slob. Going to bed with him is something I put off as long as I can. Is there a solution to my problem? — Turned Off In Topeka

Dear Turned Off: Yes — but your husband is the only one who can solve it. I'm not trying to defend "Fatso" but there are an awful lot of men who are good to look at but yucky in other ways. A wise wife changes what she can, accepts that which she cannot change, and has the wisdom to know the difference.

Dear Ann Landers: This is for the woman who is tired of shouting at her deaf mother-in-law.

I understand exactly how you feel. It IS annoying. But nobody WANTS to be deaf. Here are some practical suggestions which I guarantee will help if you will act on them:

1. Be sure your mother-in-law knows you are talking to her. Get her attention before you start.

2. Face her. All deaf people lip-read to a certain extent and gather clues from your facial expression.

3. Speak SLOWLY and more distinctly. Enunciate clearly. Don't slur word endings. Use your lips and your hands when explaining something.

4. Get to the point. Like a good news story, explain first the what, who, when and where. Then go on and elaborate as much as you wish. She needs to know what you are talking about.

5. When there are others present, help her by saying, "We are talking about 'Cousin Joe.'" This will prevent her from interrupting with inappropriate remarks.

6. Raise your voice only when necessary. Shouting in her ear will only make her nervous.

7. If she asks you to repeat, use a different key word. Instead of, "we bought a new car," say, "We just bought a new Chevrolet."

8. If you have to say it again, do so graciously. She feels bad enough having to ask you to repeat. Just smile sweetly and think of the stars you are getting in your crown, dear. Signed — Deaf Also

Dear Also: Thank you for making a solid contribution to this space today. The millions of hard of hearing will bless you.

Puppy love was all too short for one of these two camels at the Dallas Zoo recently. One bit the other and the two went their separate ways. (UPI)

Jefferson City pigeons outfoxing legislators

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The finest minds in state government are being outfoxed by a bunch of bird brains. "I don't care what some people say. Pigeons are smart," says a harrassed Bill Moon, acting director of the Missouri Division of Design and Construction. Moon should know. For 10 years he and others have been trying to figure out some way to hang a convincing "You're Not Welcome Here " sign for the estimated 250,000 pigeons which lounge around the Capitol complex.

Nothing has worked.

Two years ago the Senate, with great hilarity, cut out $50,000 Moon requested to come up with some kind of pigeon control program.

It doesn't take much imagining to come up with some of the lines in that debate.

But Moon doesn't find any of it funny.

It takes three men working eight hours a day for four days a week to scoop up and haul away pigeon droppings. The total haul comes to about 12 big dump truck loads a year.

Maintenance men are forever having to clear vents, power blowers and airconditioning condensers clogged with pigeon feathers.

The white marble and friezes of Missouri's historic Capitol are stained. Moon says it takes a wire brush to clean up the mess.

But that doesn't work too well either. It leaves a white spot. So, normally the building is sandblasted at one time, which is an expensive project for the three-and-a-half acres of wall space and two acres of roof.

When you get around to talking about killings pigeons, officials in Jefferson City continue to be haunted by the big starling kill of 1967. Thousands of the black birds had taken to roosting at the Executive Mansion. Gov. Warren Hearnes ordered their removal.

Somebody came out from the state's Conservation Department and certified that those birds were indeed starlings.

So one morning Jefferson City woke up to the multiple blasts of shotguns. Down came the starlings. But also down came some purple martins—an endangered species.

Well, no one can work up a fury like the protectors of endangered species. And no one in Jefferson City has forgotten that uproar.

So Moon approaches the killing of pigeons very carefully. He has tried feeding them poisoned corn, grain too large for smaller birds like purple martins. However, Moon found out pigeons don't like corn.

There was talk of running electric wires. But that works only on flat spaces. The pigeons move immediately to one of the innumerable crevices of the Capitol's ornate Greek architecture.

Moon fears purple martins wouldn't be so smart.

Moon talks about perhaps using a poisoned roost. The poison soaks through the pigeon's feet. Down comes the dead pigeon.

But Moon worries that another bird, say a purple martin, might take to the roost.

Moon is perplexed.

Now comes the Senate to the rescue. Sen. John Scott, D-St. Louis, remembered a boyhood tale that pigeons are scared by owls. Scott bought a $2.79 plastic owl at a local hardware store. Out it went, hanging from a window bar, scowling at any pigeon which dared approach.

Scott was followed by nearly every senator.

Today, tourists drive by and no doubt are baffled by the sight of dozens of plastic owls swaying from the Capitol's third and fourth floors.

Of course, Moon heard a lot about the $2.79 solution. It was a far cry from the $50,000. Once again the thrifty Senate had come to the rescue of the taxpayers.

However, Moon said he recently came out of the building and up above was a pigeon roosting on the head of one of the swinging owls.

"I keep telling you these pigeons are not so dumb," Moon added. "After awhile they catch on, like anyone else would do."

Two brothers electrocuted at Cedar Hill

CEDAR HILL, Mo. (AP) — Two Hillsboro brothers were electrocuted Tuesday when a cable they were moving struck a high-power wire at a home construction site here, Jefferson County authorities said.

The victims were identified as Brian Pinckard, 23, and Robert, 20.

Police said the accident occurred as the Pinckards, who were employed by a construction firm, were attempting to move a shower stall from a truck into a home under construction.
